DRIFTED IN WITH THE TIDE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

A girlish form—still, cold and white,
Drifted in on the tide last night,
And lay on the sands, in the morn's gray light.

The rising sun cast a flickering gleam
O'er her face, as calm as an angel dream.
Bathed the cold clay with a warm, red beam.

Kissed the marble brow and waving hair.
The perfect line, dainty-moulded form,
And the bare white limbs, wondrous fair.

In the golden hair was seaweed hung,
To the fleeting form was seaweed clung,
Drifted in with the tide—so fair, so young.

Round the queenly neck, wet, dead and cold,
A slender chain of glittering gold,
And a tiny locket, tarnished and old.

In it, a curl of jetty hair,
Cherished, 'twas long! with tender care,
And a dark, handsome face that was false as fair.

The tale of her life is easily told—
And of her death; the story is old!
She loved him! he love, grew cold.

And the pure world drew in its white robes aside,
Never quite kind, nor prone to forgive; she died,
And all that was left drifted in with the tide.

CONGO, THE CONJURER.

A STORY OF SHOW LIFE.

CHAPTER XLIX.

THE SECRETS OF THE OLD HOUSE.

About an hour before dinner was on the table, the young prima donna found herself alone with her supposed secretary and companion—in reality the showman and his wife. Monk now explained what had happened in the small hours of the night. The prima donna heard him with intense astonishment. The possibility that Arthur's mother was alive overwhelmed her. Could this be proved, there would be no doubt about the restoration of Arthur to his rank and station. But what had become of the unfortunate lady? Monk decidedly believed in a mad-house, to which, after having been drugged, she had been removed while the pretended funeral was about.

The prima donna had her own opinion, but she kept it to herself. If she could but effect the deliverance of Lady Everton, what a glorious victory over the usurper of his step-son's rights! She was able to do very much as she liked in that house. Deep as was the outward respect shown to her by the ladies, there was a stern under-current of jealousy which could not be got over. When, therefore, the gentlemen being still at their wine, the prima donna escaped to the picture-gallery, the library, or any other secluded retreat, she was never molested. The house was large and rambling, and, having been built at various periods, presented the anomaly of all sorts of architecture, and stairs and passages apparently leading to nowhere and nothing. As soon, therefore, as the ladies had escaped from the dinner-table, she hurried to her own room, and put a grey cloak over her dress, which, with a hood, completely veiled her form. The servants were all down stairs, occupied, doubtless, with the pleasant duty of supper. She had provided herself with a lamp; but the stairs and passages in the greater part of the house were well lit up. She strolled along unaffectedly, as if for walking's sake—up one flight of stairs, down another, along winding passages; but everything appeared open and without concealment, until, at the lower part of the house, she came upon a dark and gloomy passage, which was wholly unprovided with lamps. Listening eagerly for every sound, and failing to detect anything alarming, the courageous girl entered the dark passage, which soon terminated in a large door. This yielded to her hand, and she found herself in a huge vaulted chamber, without windows, whatever light there might be falling from above. Several doors led out of this chamber, but every one of them was locked. Here was a mystery. But she could do nothing at the moment to elucidate it. Suddenly she heard steps, and, her heart beating wildly, looked around for a place of concealment. A curtain, hanging in front of a sort of empty niche, gave hope of secrecy, and behind this she at once concealed herself. Not a minute too soon. The door by which she had entered opened, and a man and woman stepped in. The latter, a dark, handsome, middle-aged woman, very stylishly dressed, and who had been pointed out as the housekeeper, carried a basket; and the other, a confidential valet to the baronet, bore a lamp. In his hand was a heavy stick, that would have been a formidable weapon against a highwayman, much less against a frail woman. They opened the door opposite that by which they had entered, and, passing quickly through, closed it. The prima donna, more affected than she had ever been on the stage, rushed after them after a moment's delay. But the door was carefully secured. Nevertheless the brave girl believed she had discovered the secret of the prison-house. In this old, half ruined, and wholly deserted wing of the mansion, the unfortunate mistress of the house was cruelly confined. Without a moment's loss of time, she returned to her room, which had three windows looking out upon the Home Park. In the centre of one of these she placed her lamp, and screened it from the room by means of the toilet-mirror. Then she resumed her usual toilet, and went down stairs just in time to see the baronet and his friends coming from the dining room. He was slightly flushed, but was unusually polite and attentive, insisting upon leading the prima donna to the piano, where, nothing loth, she gave vent to some of her pent-up feelings in a number of the most pathetic recitatives and songs from "Norma." All listened spell-bound. When she had done, the young people suggested a dance. The signora refused to leave the piano, and graciously kept up the ball for some hours. At midnight the company dispersed, and the signora went up slowly to her own room. She found her suite retired. She had told her lady's maid to go to bed. She proceeded at once partially to disrobe herself, and then put on a dark walking-dress. Having so appatelled herself, she opened one of the windows, and peered out into the darkness. On the edge of the lawn stood a dark, cloaked figure, who waved his hand in obedience to her signal. The signora now left her room, and began her journey down stairs. The lights had nearly all been put out. She had taken care to learn the position of the baronet's bed room, and that he had a staircase to himself. She took one of a narrow character, and generally used by the servants. It brought her out into a side-hall, the door of which was bolted only on the inside, without being locked. Cautiously and slowly the door was opened, closed again, and the young girl was out in the chaotic darkness of the night. Swiftly as Camilla running over the field of Rome, she sped across the lawn, to find herself clasped in the arms of the young keeper. A silent embrace.

"Have you heard the news?" at last said the youth.

"I have. Your mother is said to be alive, and I am sure of it—"

"Heaven bless you, Nelly, for those words! It is not only because her recovery will insure me rank and station, but because I wish to make up to her in some way for what she has suffered for my sake. But pardon my interruption. Tell me what you have discovered."

The girl related her adventure. Before she had finished Arthur was drawing her away towards the western end of the house, beyond which was a disused wing, ivy-clad and half in ruins. In this latter were still closed rooms.

"It has never been a secret since the tragic death of my grand-father," said Arthur, in a low tone. "He was murdered, some say by robbers, others by an unjust step-ward, whom he had discovered robbing him. He his as it may, the place was condemned and closed. Can my poor mother be there?"

He went slowly around what in a foreign palace would have been called a pavilion. He listened as he passed each window. In vain. No sound reached his ears. The pavilion stood upon some old vaults, which were said to have been stored with gunpowder and arms in the days of the Parliamentary wars. That there was an entrance to it from without Arthur was certain, but where he had never learned. After a keen examination of the locality, it was determined to effect an entry from the inside; but for this purpose it was necessary to be provided with tools to force open the doors. Much as the young man felt on the subject, he determined to defer his expedition to the next night. Then the fair girl consented again to assist him. This being agreed on, they slowly made their way in the direction of the door by which the signora had made her exit. After some few more words were exchanged the young lovers parted. She retired to her chamber, while Arthur went to the keeper's house to rest until daylight, when he kept the covert of the woods.

CHAPTER L.

THE SHADOW.

Nearly the whole of the next day Sir Charles Everton was absent—called away, he said, on very important business, by his bankers. When he returned he was grave and stern, and even pale. The signora watched him with a keen and suspicious glance. She was satisfied that the crisis was approaching, and feared—she knew not what. After dinner, when he joined the ladies, the baronet was unusually exhilarated with wine, and, in fact, in uncommon high spirits. Something had certainly happened. The vignora kept a keen watch on him, and when she noticed an eagerness on his part to get rid of the company early, determined to thwart him.

This she did easily do by keeping up the musical excitement. As she sat at the piano, watching him in the glass, she noticed him look continually at his watch, bite his lip, and move uneasily about. At length, as the clock struck twelve, prima donna leaped up, and with a laugh, spoke sad for detaining them so late. But not a moment was now lost by her. Going up to her bed room, she hurriedly changed her dress, and made her way down stairs. She went out into the open air, and glanced, as usual, across the lawn. For a few minutes, in answer to a low whispered signal from the girl, no answering response came. Then suddenly a light figure bounded over the grass, and what, apparently, was a Gipsy boy, appeared upon the scene.

"Oh! lady, have you seen him, the master?" the other cried.

The signora looked keenly at the Romi, as they call themselves—though Christian nations call them Zingari, Cigari, Gipsies, Gitanos, Egyptians, and Bohemians.

"Girl," she said, gravely, "I have not seen him. Surely you are a friend?"

"Lady, I am his friend. You recollect me, I see. Many a time and oft has the poor Gipsy girl begged to save him from the shafts. This morning he left me with directions to meet him on his way here to-night. He wished me to keep watch, while you carried out some plan of importance. From that hour neither I nor any of his friends have seen him."

The prima donna stood as if annihilated.

"Surely none of these bad men have got hold of him?" she faltered.

"He has many enemies. Some of my people are on his track; but his bitter foe is the house-dweller under whose roof you live."

"Great heavens! and while we pause here he may be murdered. They will scruple at nothing. Wait here until I return."

And she hurried into the house, and up stairs, regardless of appearances. Then she knocked at the door of the room in the suite of apartments occupied by her. After a few moments Monk appeared in his dressing-gown, quite starting with amaze and awe when he saw her white face.

"What is the matter?!" he asked.

"Dress quickly, dear father! Arthur has been captured by his deadly foes! Not a moment is to be lost!" cried the girl.

"In one instant," he replied.

In five minutes at most Monk was ready, and following the girl down stairs to where the young Gipsy awaited them.

"Go back, my child," said the showman, and leave everything to me. Watch Sir Charles well. The crisis has come, and the evil-doer shall be punished."

The trembling young woman obeyed, and went into the house, but not to sleep. The whole of that livelong night she kept watch in her chamber. When breakfast was announced she was compelled to decline going down on the plea of a headache. Meanwhile Monk had set out with the Gipsy girl on his way to consult the detective. That worthy occupied apartments at an inn, where they had strict orders to call him on the first alarm. The girl entered into full particulars. She had left Arthur on his way to the nearest town, where he said he had certain purchases of importance to make. He would be back early, he said, and wished her to accompany him to the Hall. He had given no particular clue to what he was about to do. But, though Zelah had watched him depart, and then again waited for him on his return, no trace of him had been seen. Septimus Flint at once determined to make a dash for the Gipsy camp, where the Patterer and his friends had notoriously passed their time since their arrival in London. Flint had kept his eye upon them, and scarcely a move had they made but had been watched. Arming himself and assistant, and collecting some constables, and all the young keepers as they went, the whole party hurried, in solemn silence, to where the tents of the brown people were pitched. Their faces were easily made out, and, by the exercise of great caution, the attacking party was close upon them before they could make the slightest attempt at defence. The Gipsies were taken by surprise, and made no defence against so formidable a party of men armed to the teeth. But neither the Patterer, nor Pharaoh, nor Namiah was to be found among them. They had left them on the previous night on a long journey, and did not know when they would return. While the Gipsies were kept close in their tents a search was made round about, but not the slightest trace of the fugitives was to be seen.

"A hundred pounds reward to any who will put us on their track! The villains are up to no good, and will have you driven forever from the green woods and dales of Everton," said the detective.

A dead silence prevailed. None answered.

"It is not our practice," said one of the old men, "to betray our friends."

The detective replied by pouring out a fearful category of accusations against the Patterer, who had been the main cause of the disgrace into which Pharaoh had fallen. They had no objection to give any information with regard to the tramp, and yet all they could say was that they had hired a covered wagon, which it was their intention to go to London in. But whether they had done so or not it was impossible to say. The detective was compelled to be satisfied with this explanation, and the whole party then left. Monk asked the detective what he thought.

"Well," said Septimus Flint, "the Gipsies always were liars from the day they first made their appearance in Europe. But there is no saying; still, nothing can be done until morning."

They were crossing the highway when this conversation commenced, on their way to the inn. The trot of a horse was heard coming down the road at a rapid rate. All drew up to let the rider pass.

"Arthur!" cried the Gipsy girl.

Without another word she sprang at the horse's head, and the youth, drawing in, found himself surrounded by friends. Their satisfaction may be imagined. Without another word they adjourned to the inn, where, dismissing all the strangers to the kitchen, there to drink their fill, Monk, the detective, Arthur, and the Gipsy girl, ordered refreshments in the parlor, and an explanation ensued. Arthur had ridden over to Helmstone to procure certain tools with which he had intended to force his way into that part of the Hall where he believed his mother to be confined. He had great difficulty in procuring them, as they were to a certain extent the tools of burglars. At last, however, he found a man willing to procure them, and adjourned to an inn to await the completion. While talking his dinner, he saw Sir Charles Everton ride up, drink a bottle of wine, and then go forth into the town. Impelled by an irresistible impulse, he rose and followed him. The baronet was on foot, and took his way towards the most fashionable quarter, and, as he had some faint suspicion, stopped before a celebrated lunatic asylum. He was admitted, and remained inside quite two hours. When he came out he mounted his horse and rode off home. What did it mean? Was his mother in this refuge for those whose minds had, as it were, parted from their bodies, or was he, in fear of discovery, about to have her removed to this prison of the soul? That was the question he wished to learn. How was it to be done? After some reflection he determined to watch the asylum, and see if any one came out whom he might question. He waited hours, but at last he pounced upon a gaunt-looking personage, a keeper who was on leave. Arthur had plenty of money, and had easily induced the man to join him in a bowl of punch. He professed to have a relative whom he wanted to get rid of, and asked how it was to be done.

[illegible] "anything with money—nothing without."

A second bowl of punch made him quite confidential. Arthur learned that they were to send for a new patient—a lady, who would require a padded carriage—on the following evening. He, the keeper, was to accompany the coach. Arthur now knew all that he required, and returned to his inn. The hour was late, much time having been consumed in inducing the mad-house-keeper to a proper state of mind, but Arthur determined not to lose one moment. His mother was not dead, but was confined in the old wing of Everton Hall, and was about to be nefariously removed to a mad-house.

"And now what is to be done?" he said, addressing Monk and the detective.

"I'll tell you to-morrow," said Septimus Flint, with a yawn, and retired.

Arthur shortly after did the same, but when the other two came down to breakfast he had taken his departure, on horseback, having ridden away. The detective and Monk looked at one another in dark surprise. What could it mean?

CHAPTER LI.

WHAT IT DID MEAN.

Arthur Everton could obtain no rest. The thought of his mother confined in a gloomy dungeon, about to be removed to a mad house, gave him so much uneasiness as to murder sleep. He tossed and turned until, at length, his brain was on fire, and he could bear this state of doubt and agitation no longer. He rose, and, going down stairs, easily aroused an ostler, who, for a fee of no small dimensions, gladly saddled his horse. He then, forgetting everything, but the one task on which he was bent, the liberation of his mother, darted off at full speed. The only precaution he took was to see to his pistols, a habit he had learned in America. Then setting spurs to his horse, which was an animal of great speed and endurance, he darted off in the direction of Everton. All know the exhilaration of equine exercise. It appears to impart a glow to the body, and lightness to the spirits, which rises above the common level, which no other corporal exertion ever produces. After a time even Arthur, despite the dismal thoughts which oppressed his brain, began to feel the effects of the poetry of motion. His cheek warmed, his heart beat more freely, and hope took the place of fear and despondency. By the time he had reached the park he was in a glow, both mentally and bodily. Leaping a fence, he made his way to the fir-plantation, the deer park, and to the fish ponds, where he fastened his horse to a tree, and slowly made his way towards the house. It was six o'clock in the morning, and a dewy mist hung over all nature. He cast his eyes warily about, knowing, as he did, who were in the forest. He would have given much to have met with the Gipsy girl, knowing what a good scout and spy she was. But, save a few deer which browsed under the trees, and yonder in the meadows, a sprinkling of small cattle, all living things were hushed. Once or twice Arthur placed his hand upon his pistol, as he fancied he heard a slow, cautious step behind him. He paused and listened, believing he heard the cracking of dry leaves, under the influence of a heavy tread. But though he listened keenly, and walked with all the more caution, he heard no repetition of the sound. Still he could not divest himself of the thought of being tracked. How he longed for the fog and mist to clear away, and give him an open view of the park! But here he is upon the lawn, and must devise some means of entering the house. He looks up at the window of the room occupied by the prima donna, and sees that the blinds are down. Fain would he see her sweet face peering down upon him from above. But to awaken her would be to alarm the house, and this, above all things, he is anxious to avoid. He reaches the neighborhood of the mysterious and haunted wing, which he gazes at with deep anxiety and alarm. But action, and not thought, can save. He clambers upon the terrace, which runs along the whole of the picture-gallery, and examines the windows. They are closely fastened by means of shutters. All are tried in turn, but none of them yield. He draws a long, pointed knife from its sheath—another American importation—and passes it through a slit in one of the shutters. For some time the inside heap resists, but, by gradually working, it finally yields. The window is soon opened, by the summary process of breaking a pane, and, passing his hand in, until he could undo the catch, he then leaped into the gallery, having committed a burglary in his own house. Carefully he drew the shutters together, and set [illegible] tion, he made his way in the direction of the haunted wing. It was soon reached, but the door out of the circular room was far too much for him—the lock resisted his most cautious efforts. While he was engaged in the trial and had just determined to take off the lock, he heard footsteps behind, and had barely time to hasten to the place of concealment indicated by the young prima donna, when Charles Everton and the housekeeper entered, the latter bearing a small basket. Charles Everton, whose face was white and stern—whose dark frown showed the terrible nature of the resolution to which he had come—opened the door with a curious patent key, and after admitting the woman, went in himself and closed the door. In two minutes Arthur had opened it, and was on the track. Thick, heavy matting covered the passage, and heavy carpets a flight of stairs, which the two descended. Arthur, haggard and trembling, followed, in time to see them enter, by a vaulted door of low character, an antechamber. The windows were at the top [illegible] Again they opened a door, and now, as they left it open, he saw the whole mystery. This room was in the centre of the haunted wing, and had, it was said, been built by an alchemist, or Rosicrucian, or some studious man, to shut out wholly and completely the outer noise. It was padded, was lit by a perpetual lamp, and was ventilated by numerous cunning contrivances in the roof. Here, white, gaunt, haggard, a perfect skeleton, reclined Lady Everton. Arthur had recovered his mother, but in what a state! A ghost could not have been paler or more unsubstantial.

"Well, madame, the underground seems to agree with you," said Charles, brutally.

"Something sustains me," replied a faint and hollow voice, "and that is hope. Providence will not let me die, even in this fetid den, until I have seen and recognized my boy."

"I tell you he is dead."

"Tis false! It was to rob him of his inheritance that you conceived the foul plan of crying out to the world that I am dead. No—no. He lives, and I know it."

"Well, madame, all this recrimination is useless. I came to tell you to prepare for a removal. Your presence in my house is inconvenient, as I intend taking to myself another mate, who may have curiosity to search the haunted wing."

"You dare not! And yet you dare do any vile and fiendish act. It is in your nature. But this is not your motive. My son has come back, and you fear that he will discover the wretched and miserable trick you have played."

"Do not excite yourself with such follies," sneered the pseudo-baronet. "Your son——"

"Is here!" said a terrible voice; and Arthur Everton bounded into the room, to stand, pistol in hand, between the unfortunate invalid and her wicked and ruffianly husband.

Charles Everton stood amazed, appalled, unable to speak or act. Lady Everton gave one wild, impassioned shriek, rose to her feet, and clasped her long-lost son around the neck. He still kept his pistol pointed towards the astounded master of the house. At this moment the great bell of the hall door was rung violently. Steps were heard. Then the Patterer came bounding into the room.

"Where is he? I followed him. Ah! there he stands," he cried. "But, master, there's a whole party of men on horseback——"

"My darling! my brave boy!" cried the enraptured mother.

Arthur stooped to embrace her. The Patterer saw a glance in Charles Everton's eyes. It was understood. Next moment Arthur lay stunned and insensible on the floor beside his mother, who had fainted. Charles Everton lifted a carpet, and, stamping his foot, a trap was lowered, and revealed a flight of stairs leading to a cellar-looking vault.

"Down with them!" cried the ruffian, hastily; "keep them still at any price! I will return as soon as I am rid of my visitors. Mrs. Marsh, close up the trap, and then clear away every sign of life; when you have done, come out and close every door."

And he hastened away. The Patterer did not much admire his task, but obeyed. The cellar was a receptacle for the odds and ends of the cage who once had made use of the room, and had left behind him boxes, mattings, and all kinds of refuse. A faint light was admitted by some ventilating holes, and enabled him to make out the character of the place. He deposited his burdens on some of the boxes, secured Arthur's pistols, and waited in no very good humor with himself and others.

[illegible] with a mass of his character, meant that he was miserable. Meanwhile Charles Everton had descended to the inhabited part of the house, and found that the hour knocking and ringing arose simply from the arrival some early guests, who, having ridden some miles, had taken the liberty of old acquaintances to come in and ask for breakfast. He was therefore hopelessly engaged for some hours—hours of suspense and agony. The ladies of the household came down, conversation arose, and the host was on the rack. About twelve every one dispersed. He at once obtained the key from the head keeper, and hastily took his way to the haunted wing of the mansion. He reached the padded room, and raised the trap.

"Thought you'd trepanned me," growled the Patterer. "Don't waste time in talk! I am hunted closely! Are your friends near?"

"Yes, within call."

"Can you hide these two for a few hours—for a week at the other hand, take us to where the poor lady is confined; give her up quietly, with her son, and all may be settled without exposure."

A cold, sarcastic smile passed over the lips of the baronet.

"Allow me to see the warrant," he said. "Yes, quite correct—a search warrant on sworn affidavits. It is quite correct. Will you begin with the ladies' bedrooms?" he continued, with a sarcastic insolence, which rather alarmed the two gentlemen.

"There is no reason to search the inhabited part of the house," replied Septimus Flint. "If you will show us over the shut-up wing——"

"With great pleasure, gentlemen," said the baronet. "This way."

And, without summoning any servant, he led them from the library to the picture-gallery. At the end of this was a bell, with the word "Housekeeper" written under it. This he rang and waited.

The woman soon appeared with the key, and the baronet, now cool and collected, opened the door, and ushered the unwelcome guests into the haunted wing. He then bade them search for themselves. They did so keenly and carefully, especially the padded-room, which, despite all efforts of the housekeeper, exhibited decided marks of having been inhabited recently. But it was empty now. Septimus Flint stamped his foot and at once detected the presence of a hollow beneath. He stooped, and removing the carpet, revealed the trap-door.

"Make yourselves at home!" sneered the baronet, as he explained the mechanism of the trap.

With stern faces the two men examined the cellar and then came up.

"There is fresh blood upon this carpet," said Septimus; "there is blood below upon one of the boxes. What does it all mean?"

"I know not. My housekeeper does the room once a week, though it is never used now. More I know not."

The men exchanged glances.

"Sir," said Septimus, sternly, after a moment's thought, "in some way or other justice is baffled. We happen to know that you had made arrangements to remove this unfortunate lady to a celebrated mad-house. If you have done so, well and good. She will be released. Her son will be restored to her and nothing worse will happen to you than a perpetual restlessness on the Continent. But if you have harmed her or him, beware! Your blood be on your own head!"

And, without waiting for the baronet's answer, the detective walked off, followed by his silent and stern looking acolyte. With a pretence at looking big—which was indeed pretence—Charles Everton followed, revolving in his mind what he should do. The infatuated man still dreamed of a marriage with the beautiful prima donna, and determined to bury it, collect all valuables, sell out all stock and make a dash for America or the Continent. Flint and Monk soon found themselves walking towards where a boy was holding their horses. He had one himself and was to take them back to the inn.

"I heard Joker just now," said the boy; "I be sure of it."

This was the hired horse which Arthur had ridden. Without the slightest hesitation they ordered him to lead the way to where they truly found the animal tied at a thicket, and, having finished the contents of a nose-bag, striving in vain to shake it off. This was proof positive that Arthur had been there and was prevented from returning. They were exhausted and fatigued, having ridden here, there and everywhere before a magistrate would sign the search warrant, and felt it necessary to return to the inn. The search for Arthur must be made in daylight. Just as they were about to mount a dark, good looking boy came out of the bushes near the pond and gazed wistfully at Monk. He did not appear sure, though he had a strong suspicion. He then spoke some few words in the Romany dialect, which made the other start. He had called him by his almost forgotten name of Congo the Conjuror.

"Who and what are you?" cried Monk. "Surely not Zelah?"

"I am and a friend to Arthur Everton, the brave housedweller. Where is he?"

"By heavens!" cried Monk to the detective, "we have found what we want. If he is above ground we shall find him."

He then explained what had happened, and finally declared his belief that the brave boy had fallen into the hands of his bitter foe. Zelah heard him with a dark frown and at once promised to put herself on the track. She explained that for days she had been watching the movements of Pharaoh, the Patterer, and their accomplices. Delighted with their meeting and making a rendezvous for the evening, the two gentlemen hastened to their inn, ordered dinner and prepared to lay their plans. Dessert, cigars and wine found them still talking over the matter and discussing the best course to pursue to induce Sir Charles Everton to come to terms.

"You take great interest in the boy and do not honor the supposed baronet with much affection!" said the detective, dryly.

"I love the boy—I hate him! He has been the serpent on the hearth all my life. Shall I reveal to you in confidence the secret of my life?" asked Monk, with a strange smile.

"I should feel highly honored," said Flint.

FAREWELL!

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY "DORSE."

"Farewell!" that's just what she said when I left—
Shipped on a bark to go over the sea—
And it seemed that of everything I was bereft,
For there we only we two, my young claer and me.
You see I tried hard to get work along shore,
But I had no book-learning, I couldn't write well,
So I thought I would ship—I had done it before—
And that was the cause of her saying "farewell."

She was a delicate creature, she never was well,
She pined right away when our good mother died,
But she never complained, that I ever heard tell,
Tho I knew by her eyes that she often had cried;
And when we were getting the bark under weigh,
We stood on the pier, and she cried hard to quell
The feelings that seemed bound to have their own way,
As she whispered, through tears, "My dear brother, farewell."

"Farewell!" How that word seemed to ring in my ears;
I heard it at night and throughout the long day;
Up aloft, at the wheel—in the midst of my fears,
I couldn't help thinking of her, far away.
I suppose 'twas because there was only us two,
And my going away seemed to her like a knell;
For you see that from childhood together we'd grew,
And 'twas breaking her heart when she wished me "farewell."

Well, I got back at last, but was heart sick and sore,
For I had been wrecked, cast away, and all that,
And I hadn't heard from her for three years or more,
And I tried to cheer up, but my spirits were flat;
I found her at last—in a grave, 'mid the flowers,
Where the willows' long branches so mournfully fell—
By the moss covered head-stone I've spent many hours,
While inscribed on its face there was simply—"farewell."

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY MARK QUENCHER.

"MURDER VOOD OUD!"

Dis vas poen a shdory of a boleeceman, vat vas a dedecdifs. Id vil brofe der truths of der oldt exbremion, "murder vood oud," in der mood berfeckted manners. Id vill show how id "vood oudt" and did "vood;" and how der dedecdifs vas ketch der feller vat vas in der murder pizzness. Read dot mit carefully, and I hopes id gifs a varning to all "murderers-vat-vood-be."

* * * * * * * * *

It vas apoud dree-quarters bast nigbd-dime von lofely efening in der year some dime ago. I vas sidding down mid myself, enchoying a honsed libe by my door-shdairs, when ub coomed a feller mit der news.

"Oh! vas you dere, Peder Hoggiefritz vas poen gone diedt mit a biedol of his heart!"

I chumbed ub quicker, und my tibe goned tiself oud mit exdonishment as I cried:—"Oh! no! dot coodend vas. Somepody dold you a foolishness."

"No, sir; dot's so. Hoggiefritz vas entered last nighd py a roppers vat endealed his greenbex, und shooted him murdered peasides."

In a momends I vas go to der place, und vas shake like a drempels. Dot vas quite too drue. There vas my goot frendt Peder Hoggiefritz, "der noblest of all dhose Romans fellers," mit whom I had many a glasses of beer vat I vas got headts of my hair, laying there all gone diedt mit himself, mit a murder done py him.

Vell, as I vas a botsecomans vat vas a dedecdif, von of dhose fellers vat knows shrydings, und more seider, I righd avay pegins to find oud who vas der cheadlemans vat vas manufacdure sii dot berformances. But der unreasonable rascal didn't'd hafe der goodness to leave his cardt or some oder "clues" vat you call dis—so I codd fetch him soons. I medidely searched der neighborhoo, bud I cood find nodding there excebd der hole, so I dood my leave avay, after schearing dot I vood find dot receder, efen if I had to make him dracks to der sand hots, by chinks!

* * * * * * * * *

Days vistled py, months got veared oud, years succeeded baad, cenduries—no, dot's too far vruff. I had searched for dot feller vat looted Hoggiefritz mid a hadcke, for years und years, und don't'd vas cood get schquainted mit him. Von day dime in der shrimps of der season, I vas lookin' for a feller vat vas wride his name dhee mudch ad der boddom of oder feller's cheeks.

In der progresses of my search, I von day coomed agross a leedle prook of vater, in der coundry, vich vas running avay mid itself in sudch a bleasand manner dot I, who vas mudch shdained py der hot of der dust, vas glad to sid myself py der backs of der side to shdick my feets, vas vas bare, in, und visdie, so good I felt. Vhile I vas engaged in dis gomfordable bosishion, looking ad der fishes, vat seemed py my feet, und leadly enchoying dhere exdonished looks, I vas suddenly see a young feller vat vas mittle aged of old coom ub oud of der river und coom py me.

"Hello! old buffer," he says; "I vas shood dook a leedle schvim mit mineself, und I vas dife der vater under; dot's de reasons I didn'd saw you apbroach."

"Oh, dot's all right," I said; "dot's goot fun to schvim on sudch a varmy day; und I vood schvim doo, bud I don'd vas know how. I cood only dook a schvim like you saw me now, mit my feets der vater in, und my oder poddys der vater oudside of; dot's der safeness vay."

As he coomed on shore to dress oud himself I nodiced dot dhere vas a scratch py his headt. Dis maked coom up my sedtetish right avay. Ve dedecdifs cood saw so mudch more as enny ains poddy. So I keebed my oben eyes oud, dot dhey vas shkinned. Boody soon, alder ve had made oud our cesdumes on, he says of me:—

"Boody nice vedder enuf, in der shade, don'd id?"

"I dink so, seider," says I.

Vhile I vas shbeakin dis I vatched him glosely shart, und I nodiced dot he didn'd vas look my eyes sdraid in, und dot vas got some more sesbicions of me. I don'd know vad id vas, bud I feeled a subdrangy dhinking py my heets dot dis leedle mittle-aged feller vas no oder as der murderers of my frendt, Peder Hoggiefritz. So I keebed my eyes oud, und my dongue vas gif holded.

"Vat vood you say to a leedle amoosemend?" says he.

"I say so, doo," said I. "vat vill id been?"

"Let us hafe a sochibil games of pass pall, vad?" said he, ad der same dime dooking oud of his bockets a pass pall.

Now, I voodend addempt to exblain id, bud id is a dings vat vas so sure as never vas, dot so soon I seened me dot pall I vas made my mind all ub dot dot young mittle-aged feller vas der murderer chendlemen. Now I knowed me dot vas vonderful, und vood peen only ubbreciaded py dedecdifs.

Boody soon ve beginned our game. Ad der fired inndks I put down dot pall mit a fery plow. In der nexd vonce he vas go one mit a blanke. In der nexd deal der pall vas gof "shawed" in der gorner, und I beaned der half-vomlie boie von hours ahead; in der nexd heak I vas—oh! py dhunder! I vas got mixed oud, and id!

Ve bedder gone pack to our pass pall game. Vell, after blaying bood a vhile, I hit der pall sudch a leod knock dot id bunded open, und dhere, vat you dink? dher insides dumbied oud, und, py der great goodness, dot pall vas peen studded mit dot remainder of the original-murdered feller py my frendt Hoggiefritz, ah! ha!!

I had him now, sure. Der murderer had dought to hide dhem in a pail vood peen a pally place, bud—"murder vood oud." In a minades I vas on him mit his demdees py a bladol, und cried—vell, choosed der same as all dhese dedecdif fellers say, vhen dey caught a feller. Berhaps you don'd know. He vas executed and dried, und in dot vay "murder vood oud."

JAPANESE THEATRE.—Descending from the temple porch, and threading our way back through the town, we turn aside into one of the eastern streets, where there is a native theatre. Like the theatres of the Chinese, those of the Japanese are usually of wood, and this one is no exception to the rule. It is about mid-day, and the acting is at its height; for, as in Athens of old, the day, and not the night, in Japan, is considered the appropriate time for play acting. Thus, on days when the theatre is open, a native will take a holiday, and with his wife and children pass most of his time from sunrise to sunset in watching a play; and if we look round from the box into which we have found our way, and on the chairless floor on which we are squatting we can see several parties making an extempore lunch of some provisions they have brought with them. The performance which is being given is not of a regular kind; it partakes of the nature of a puppet show. Several large dolls, about half the size of life, dressed to represent the characters of the play, are brought on to the stage by as many men. These men dressed in black, and supposed to be invisible, stand behind the puppets, whose heads and limbs they move so as to suit the dialogue of the play. The dialogue is chanted by two musicians seated on the floor of a recess at one side of the stage. Of course the play is totally unintelligible to us, though by the expressions of the faces of the audience we can see when a good bit is made, or a popular maxim stated.

A RECLUSE.—Florida has an interesting hermit. He owns and occupies St. Vincent, an island of 7,000 acres, swarming with deer, cattle, birds and, we presume, musquitos.—In his house he has plenty of books, and amid these surroundings he lives alone, resenting any intrusion upon his privacy. He is a gentleman of fortune, formerly mayor of Cincinnati, and lives quite happy because he likes it.

NOTICE.

☞ CORRESPONDENTS, advertisers, and all others writing in relation to matters connected with this or any other department of the CLIPPER, are respectfully requested to address their favors to the editor and proprietor, and thereby avoid omissions, mistakes and confusion, which are likely to occur when such communications are addressed to our assistants.

NOTICE.

ADVERTISERS must hand in their favors before 6 o'clock on Monday evening, in order to have them appear in that week's issue.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ We never answer questions by mail. All addressed to us seeking information will be answered through this column only.

G. E. C.—The book referred to was written some two and a half centuries ago by a famous barrister of Lincoln's Inn, London, Eng., named Prynne. It was a large quarto volume of a thousand pages, and entitled "Histrio-Mastyx; or, the Scourge of Players." The profits on the sales of the volume, according to Hume, was "to decry stage plays, comedies, interludes, music and dancing; but the author likewise took occasion to declaim against hunting, public festivals, bull and bear baiting, Christmas keeping, Maypoles and may poles." The play houses he affirmed to be Satan's chapels, the play-haunters to be incarnate devils, and so many steps in a dance to be so many paces in hell." At the instance of Archbishop Laud he was brought before the Star Chamber, and sentenced to stand on the pillory at Westminster and Cheapside—to lose both his ears, one at each place—to pay £5,000 fine to the king, and to be imprisoned for life.

PHILADELPHIA.—"There are two men on base, and one man out; the batsman strikes a ball, which the third baseman picks up, and, touching his base, throws the ball home, thus, according to your idea, putting out two men; but, the man running home, seeing the ball thrown home, returns to third base, and is declared "out" by the umpire, and allowed to hold his base. Has he any right to return to his base?"....The moment the player running to third base was put out, that moment the player running home ceased to be a player, he had not touched the base, and was out.

C. AMORY BEECH.—We much fear that some graceless scamp has been making use of your good name without your knowledge. We have before us a communication dated Boston, June 18th, with "C. Amory Beech" appended thereto; but the language is so ungentlemanly, undignified, indecent, and so unlike that of ye genial working agent, that we deem it our duty to apprise you of the same, and thus enable you to take measures to protect yourself and fair fame from the injury sought to be done you by an unauthorized use of your name by designing knaves.

G. C. C., Lowell.—"At base ball, if a club sees that it will certainly be beaten, and that a drawn game is evidently out of hand and the umpire will refuses to put out its opponents, so as to delay the game until it rains and thus make "no game," cannot the umpire judge that the striker is out if the muff is evidently intentional?.....Umpires cannot legally do such things as you suggest. The rules were made on the supposition that clubs would not attempt such mean and discreditable efforts to escape defeat.

OLYMPIAN, Philadelphia.—1. An ace flush always beats a king flush at poker, no matter what Philadelphia cards may be. 2. We can there be any difference between two hands just alike? You state that in both hands there are an ace, king, queen, six and seven. 3. A straight is generally valued as the superior of two pair; but different localities make a different rule, wherefore therefore it should be agreed upon before commencing play.

A SUBSCRIBER, Pittsburgh, Pa.—Five miles was never rowed in single sculls in anything like the time you mention, either here or in England. In the latter country they seldom row that distance—in fact, the only race of five miles which we can call to mind there was the second between Jimmy Hamill and Harry Kelly, which the latter won in 36 minutes. The time said to have been made at Philadelphia is remarkable.

R. AND P., Jersey City.—The Paris crew, of St. John, N. B., never rowed in England, but they participated in the Exposition regatta on the Seine, Paris, France. They rowed match races with two English crews, one at Saratoga and one at Boston, Mass. John. Both of these crews were stroked by the late James Renforth, but the other three men were different.

A. READER.—John Bright contended in sculling matches with the late James Renforth twice. The first was rowed in shells, Renforth winning; the second was in open boats, Bright receiving two lengths start and being awarded the stakes on a foul, though it was apparent that his opponent was the better man.

A. S. H., Natchez.—The backer of the field loses when a person backs one horse against the field, the field is what starts against such horse, whether it comprises one horse or twenty. You will pay all of a horse from the field does not affect the bet in any shape.

REPORTER, Brooklyn.—1. The scorers of professional clubs are paid. 2. Some professionals have trades, but the "regulars" do nothing during the season but play ball. 3. Those advertisers referred to in the CLIPPER may be depended upon. 4. The Athletic grounds are on Twenty-fifth and Jefferson streets, Philadelphia.

R. W. N. G.—Very little reliance can be placed upon the newspaper rumor of the poisoning of Carlotta. We did not see the manner of death mentioned. The rumor originated in the sensorious to Mexico and South America, which are credited with producing insanity when the odor is inhaled.

M. B., New Orleans.—1. The composition is not up to our standard. 2. Jenny Lind was brought to this country by Mr. P. T. Barnum. 3. We do not know sufficient about the gentleman to give you a definite answer. 4. The salary depends on the popularity of the artist.

J. F., Pittsburgh.—The fastest time on record for five miles, with a turn, in a single scull, is 35 min. and 10 sec., by Josh Ward. The time given out for the Scharff-Butler race on the Schuylkill, and that for the single scull race at the National Amateur regatta there last week, is not reliable.

J. H. VAN C., Washington, D. C.—1. Yes. 2 It is not catalogued by the New York publishers, but it may be published in England. 3. Solmate, in chess, is when a player puts himself in position of checkmate.

H. D., New Orleans.—When a player assists his partner the latter cannot go alone, for the reason you state. A player going alone and getting enrolled forfeits two points only for such euchre.

OLD HAND.—Only one person can play it alone, and, if he is euchred, the opposite party score two points. The person who can play it alone is he who takes the responsibility of the trump by either making, taking up, or ordering up.

P. V. F., Utica.—1. At casino the lowest card deals and ace is low. 2. The points gained by each party are scored as they are made, and the player who has the greatest number of points wins the game.

LIVE OAK.—1. The ace counts both ways in straights at bluff; for instance, ace, deuce, trey, etc., or ace, king, queen, with king, queen, jack and ten. 2. No point has precedence over another. 3. Yes, the ace, as stated above.

O. A. MOUNT, Skowhegan.—The bills were all received, thank you, and will be sent from time to time. The young ladies are those who have since been known as the Worrell sisters, their father clowning it with the concern at the time.

STRAWS.—As there were more than 100 straws in the bundle, the party who guessed the nearest to them won. It is a well founded arithmetical rule that the greater invariably includes the less.

NUMSKULL, Philadelphia.—If votes were first cast, then, according to the strict interpretation of the term, Grant was not nominated by acclamation, the acclaim being simply for effect, and as unanimous endorsement of the nomination already made.

J. L., Lynchburg, Va.—The word "base-ball player" is not omitted in Webster's unabridged dictionary; it may be in the abridged edition, since, for brevity, many words are left out that have only simple prefixes attached.

A SUBSCRIBER.—A Ward Brothers—the same crew that rowed at Saratoga—were beaten by the Paris crew, of St. John, N. B., on the 21st of Oc ober, 1868, at Springfield, Mass. The Wards have not been beaten since.

R. F., Newark, N. J.—Professo George Goldie (not John) is still living, and as superintendent will direct the gymna tic exhibition at the one hundred and twenty-fifth commencement of New Jersey College, at Princeton, on June 26th.

A. S., Boston.—1. The player's base thumb. 2. Yes. 3. You must take up your valid build of 8's and consequently return the ace to your own hand. 4. The cards remain on the table, but are not a "build."

PUGILISTICA.—Tom King, who fought Heenan, Mace and others, never fought in this country. A light-weight, bearing the same name, fought several times near New Orleans, where he died a couple of years ago.

THE BALL TOSSERS.—Martin pitches a ball which falls as it curves. Cummings delivers a ball which also curves in as it approaches the bat, thus having a double curve. The curve in question can only come from the hand of Cummings player.

E. M. L., San Francisco, Cal.—Barnum's Museum, at the corner of Broadway and Ann street, was destroyed by fire July 13th, 1865. The one situated on Broadway, just above Spring street, was burned March 18, 1868.

I. S., Cincinnati.—1. The fastest recorded railroad time is as follows:—In England, 18 miles in 15 minutes; America, 14 miles in 11 minutes. 2. The population of Brooklyn, N. Y., according to the census of 1870, is 396,099.

J. ROTH, Chicago.—1. We take no account of home runs. 2. Cannot say. 3. No. Chicago was the first city to be marked by a score of the kind, and "Chicago" it must be. 4. Neither the Athletic nor Mutual had Messrs. Boston games twice each in 1871.

G. M., Jersey City.—Hermit won the Derby in 1867, Marksman being second and Vauban third. It was won by Blue Gown in 1868.

F. H. S., Rochester, N. Y.—The lady was engaged during the past season at Wood's Theatre, Cincinnati, O. A letter addressed in care of this office should reach her.

S. A. W., Buffalo, N. Y.—You had better stick to the grocery business, as you will find it extremely difficult to get an opening on the stage.

SWINDERAND, Elizabeth, N. J.—1. There are plenty of male alto singers, but we have not space to enumerate them. 2. No; nor do we require your address.

AQUATIC, McGregor.—In a double scull boat each of the two oarsmen pull two oars, whereas in a pair-oared boat they each row a single oar.

GEO. BROWN, Bangor.—The crew formerly captained by the late Jas. Renforth, rowed at Saratoga after his death, John Bright filling the vacant seat.

CHINAMAN, Cache Creek, B. C.—"1. A plays a Jack, B a trey, a dease, scoring 14. B an ace, sequence of three. A a five and B a five, claiming a sequence of five. Is it right?".....Yes.

BIG AND LITTLE, Indianapolis, Ind.—Seventy lines, which is about the space you have marked, double column, will cost ten dollars and fifty cents for each insertion.

T. J., Cardenia, Ind.—1. London, Eng., is the largest city in the world. 2. Last year's Chicago professional club was called "The White Stockings," but we are not the proper ones to refer to that.

J. McD.—Wm. F. Cody, known as "Buffalo Bill," did not take a benefit at the Bowery Theatre, in this city, during the run of the play called "Buffalo Bill."

W. W., Jersey City.—Such a work was published in this city some years ago. Probably Ed. James could get you a copy. Send to him, as per his advertisement.

R. E., New Orleans, La.—1. If the hall in which they perform is not licensed by the Commissioners they have no license. 2. It might do for small towns. 3. That is an assumed name.

C. B. HANCOCK.—1. According to the official returns of the census taken in April, 1871, London, Eng., had a population of 3,254,260. 2. The census of the United States was taken in 1870.

H. W. F., Muncie, Ind.—You did right; we ask no favors for our correspondents except such as the manager or agent's politeness prompts him to extend.

ALL FOURS.—A deals the point for high and low are to be taken before the point for Jack—except when turned up—B, with two points to go, went out first.

R. E. S., Chicago.—No one has lost the game. No. 7 has yet to play. If 3 does not win pool, No. 3 can claim it by virtue of his former play.

NED, San Francisco.—Hersog made his first mile record of 2:43¼ at the Cincinnati Spring meeting in 1869. Prior to that, Dexter Prince's 1:44 was the fastest record.

CARTER, Providence.—1. Dinks, Mayhew and Hutchinson on "The Dog" in the best work. 2. There is no such character as you inquire about.

O. H., Jr., R. T. M., Bridgeport.—1. There are no recognized rules governing the game. 2. The China is the only Cunard steamer with oblong beds.

L. J. S.—The Athletics were defeated by the Red Stockings in their first game played during 1870, and on June 22d, 1869, by scores of 9 to 15, and 17 to 12.

WEST TROJAN.—A catch is intended. The Boston nine scored as many runs in two of their innings play as the Troys made in the entire game, and still they beat the Troy nine in two innings.

EX. H. W. FLYMOUTH, Pa.—The boat-race between the four-oared crews of Oxford and Harvard Universities, rowed on the Thames, was won by the English crew.

M. HALE, Tossers.—Martin pitches a ball which falls as it curves. Cummings delivers a ball which also curves in as it approaches the bat, thus having a double curve. The curve in question can only come from the hand of Cummings player.

CONSTANT READER.—1. Cuthbert will in the White Stocking nine in 1870, and was bound to them in 1871. 2. No. 3. No one; the ball was discharged.

COAL OIL TOMMY.—All games of cards are "hazardous," and the rules of the club ought to have clearly defined what they considered as hazardous games.

A. H., Jr., Boston.—1. Having declared to assist his partner C, the latter could not play it alone. 2. A was only entitled to two points for the capture.

J. O'W., Jr.—1. You will probably find "Beautiful Snow" published in some book or recitations. 2. Ed. C. We never answer questions concerning the private affairs of professional ladies.

C. C. C., Portland, Me.—Jennie HAIR died at Sydenham, London, Eng., August 11th, 1868. We believe she made her last public appearance in America, in this city.

A. C., Cleveland.—1. Kimball went to Kansas for the Forest City nine, of Cleveland, in 1871, and Addy for the Forest City, of Rockford, eastern field. 2. Boston nine, in six seconds, we believe.

W. H. F., Salem, Mass.—Sorry, but it is too late to publish 1871 averages. They should always be promptly sent to us at the close of the season.

HARRY.—Cannot say. Come and look over the files of the CLIPPER.

CARMEN, Brooklyn.—Go on the Capitoline grounds on Friday, and inquire of the Excelsiors.

W. H. FAY, Baltimore.—This is the first year the Athletics have had their rights as champions acknowledged.

W. W. M.—The late Walter Montgomery was born of English parents at Brooklyn, L. I.

ALB, San Francisco, Cal.—We believe the lady is not at present performing.

READER.—Nothing has been or is likely to be invented for the purpose.

B., Baltimore.—As, by your statement, it was evidently a fraudulent collusion, you are entitled to not paying the bet.

T. S. C., Syracuse, N. Y.—We cannot state the exact time. He died about a quarter before 9 o'clock, A. M., on Aug. 23d, 1871.

M. L. S., New Amesbury, Mass.—The fastest time by a steamboat from New York to Albany is 11 hours and 31 minutes, by the Alida.

T. W. D.—Charles Jeffers is the individual you enquire about, who was killed at Sing Sing by a fellow convict.

A SUB C., Mobile.—We have always decided that in cutting for deal, at euchre, the Jack is the highest card.

E. H.—Two players cannot play lone hands against each other. If one euchres the other, he scores two points only.

BRAHAM THE COMIC, Chicago.—"Discount" will average about 40 per cent.

DICK, Grass Flats, Oildom.—1. John McDevitt. 2. No; it was well known that Deery was then residing in San Francisco.

BOY NO MATTER, Washington.—1. They are playing for $10. 2. A pays for three-fourths of the quantity drank, and B one-fourth. 2. T. A., Chicago.—As A drove his horse in less than 3 minutes, he wins the bet.

A. D., Cincinnati, O.—M'me Paulina Lucca never sang in America.

S. H., Philadelphia, Pa.—The distance from Liverpool to London, Eng., is very much further by water than by rail.

G. H. C., Baltimore, Md.—We never answer questions relating to the domestic affairs of professionals.

D. P. D., Macon, Mo.—Dan Rice, who is now traveling with the Paris Pavilion Circus, is the simon pure, original Dan.

G. J. LEMMOX.—The population of London, Eng., is three millions and a quarter.

PLAGUEMINIE.—At cribbage a nine, ten and three Jacks count fifteen, viz., nine for sequences and six for pair royal.

STARLIGHT, Bloomfield, N. J.—1. Rochester, N. Y., has a population of 62,386. 2. It is an English song.

THE HOURS BY THE PARK.—We have no record to answer your question by.

G. S. P., Syracuse.—1. Three trays and a nine at cribbage count 15. 2. See answer to "Old Hand."

PINKIE, Louisville, Ky.—1. We cannot send all the numbers complete. 2. Two sixes and three trays at cribbage count 18.

SEVEN UP, Woodberry, Md.—The Jack is scored the moment it is turned, consequently A wins.

C. W. T., Chicago.—Dexter's fastest time, by which alone bets are decided, is 2:17¼.

TYPO.—If you make innovations on the established game you must make rules, also, for your own government in playing it.

P. H., Lonsdale, R. I.—The English Derby has not been won by an Irish horse for the last fifty years.

A. J., Monigomery, Ala.—Received, with thanks; will return as soon as used.

TOMMY, Denver, Col.—George F. Ketchum is at present alive and well. He is now playing in Montreal, Canada.

CONSTANT MAN.—Japanese Tommy was with the Morrid Brothers' Minstrels during the past season.

CONSTANT READER, Chicago, Ill.—We have record of their actual measurement.

SKEESICKS.—At all fours the party who plays low, not the one who captures it, takes the point.

A. F. N., Lynn, MASS.—We have decided not to re-issue for that purpose.

BOB FOWLER, Louisville, Ky.—T. L. Connor is acting at Wood's Museum in this city.

STRANGER, Baltimore, Md.—Better abandon all idea of going on the stage. You will find it very difficult to get an opening.

BOAT SONG.—Yes, by the Eckfords, in 1871. Eckford, 7; Mutual, 0, on July 4th.

X. X., Elkhart, Ind.—There are more newspapers published in London than in New York.

G. S., Buffalo.—Jim White is the better of the two. 2 Sutton is one of the best. 3. About equal.

CONSTANT READER, Ottumwa, Ia.—See advertisement under the head of miscellaneous, in another column.

WILL.—It is in order to bet on a certainty if the bettor practices no fraud.

NED, Ft. Griffin, Texas.—Mart. King, formerly of the Chicago Club, is now centre fielder of the Troy nine.

JOHN CASSORUSSA.—We are without a record of such performances as you mention.

WM. F. JOHNSON, New Orleans.—We cannot devote the space necessary to answer your question.

JOHN.—It is in order to bet on a certainty if the bettor practices no fraud.

BROWN, Pittsburgh.—Your diagram is not a crotch. There is no rule. It is a matter of agreement.

W. J.—The Prince of Wales' eldest son would be the heir to the British throne in case of his father's decease.

JIM TURNER.—1. No record. 2. You must have the shoes made to order.

C. C., New Haven, Conn.—Add Weaver is underlined to appear at the Bella Union, San Francisco, Cal.

WAVERLY.—Bets are off, the agreement on which they were based having been broken.

M. B., Lakeport.—In jumping, the distance actually cleared from toe to heel must be measured.

SPORT, Middletown, Conn.—All bets are off on unfinished games of less than five innings.

J. BLOOMFIELD.—Seven runs, one out and once left, is the best score.

DOLLY VARDEN, Springfield, O.—Our correspondents so report.

G. B. F., Philadelphia.—It is a trifle too steep for the CLIPPER.

J. T. L.—Dion Boucicault is the author of the "Long Strike."

DANIEL LYONS, N. Y.—Joseph Dion was in the largest run.

J. L. P., Springfield, Ill.—We have concluded not to renew.

A. L. G. S.—1. On the whole, we prefer that of 1871. 2. No.

E. C. W., Baltimore.—Accepted for an early appearance.

A. H.—Horace Greeley has been a candidate for Congress.

TRAVELING AGENT.—We may probably make use of it.

A. S. T.—We doubt whether you would be admitted.

FALLON AND SHANAN.—One dollar for each insertion.

ANN LEE, Covington, Ky.—Probably in our next.

HILLTON, Sunbury, Pa.—We will give it a place.

SHUSAKI, Keokuk, Iowa.—We do not require it.

MONAWK.—C and his partner forfeit the game

KID CLARKE.—P. O. received, all correct.

P. J. E.—It varies from 200 to 300 feet.

D. C., Providence, R. I.—Two years.

SUBSCRIBER.—We cannot say.

T. NEWAN.—Cannot say.

CHICAGO.—C wins.

THE "INTERNATIONAL" BOAT RACE.

We gave the result of the boat race between the Atalantas and a London crew in last week's CLIPPER, and in another part of this issue we present some additional particulars. It appears that our friends across the water have attached more importance to this aquatic contest than we had any idea of; they seem to have regarded it in the light of a national struggle, all London appearing to have had its eyes on the representatives of Albion's peaceful shores, and the only wonder is that parliament did not adjourn, in order that its members might witness the watery strife, and have an opportunity to stake their pile on the winning crew. We must acknowledge our surprise that London painted the race in such glowing colors, and magnified it into such gigantic proportions, as the cable informs us they have done. Why, on this side, very little interest was manifested in the match; and, outside of New York, the contemplated pull was scarcely mentioned. When the news of the destruction of the Atalanta's boat was received here, no one had any idea that the New York crew had the ghost of a chance to win. When the CLIPPER mentioned the fact of the loss of the boat, we incidentally remarked that the accident would "let down our boys easy," so little faith had we in their ability to make any kind of a race with the Londoners. While London was thronging the banks of the Thames with its thousands of spectators, and all England was on the tip-toe of expectation to hear the clicking of the telegraphic record of the result of the race, New York was quietly minding its regular business, or giving an eye to the workingmen's demonstration for eight hours; and the balance of the "greatest nation on the face of the earth," including Boston, scarcely remembered that such a contest was in abeyance, and were somewhat surprised on reading in the cable dispatches next morning that "America had been ignominiously beaten by the City of London Boat Club, in a race on the Thames." Many of our people were still further puzzled to see something about "Doc Withers," and the more ignorant wanted to know why any dock withers in a boat race, unless run into by a tug full of passengers. In fact, our people do not like the idea of England making such a fuss over a rowing set-to that but few outside of the metropolis and the sporting world gave a thought to. The day after the race, the London and provincial papers were filled with it, including thorough-bred editorials on the "great victory of the Londoners," and rather uncomplimentary essays on the "impotent efforts of the New Yorkers," etc. We do not complain of all England for going into ecstacies over the defeat of the American four, for we should, doubtless, have made just such an outcry had the struggle been fought out on American waters, and we had taken the enemy into camp; but we are surprised, as we have said, that London should have regarded the event in the light of a national set-to, while we merely looked upon it as an ambitious effort of four amateur rowers to try what they could do with a Thames four. Bless you, there was no nationality about it at all—it was merely New York city versus the city of London, and New York is by no means the United States of America, as our trans-Atlantic friends ought to know. We have no objection to the gentlemen on the other side glorifying themselves over their aquatic achievements, neither have we any disposition to quarrel with the British press for its sharp flings at the feebleness of "the American four," while the Alabama claims question was creating such excitement in and out of parliament, but we cannot permit our neighbors across the Atlantic's broad expanse of waters to dignify this aquatic "Tale of Two Cities" with the title of a national struggle.

FOURTHERJULY is coming. We scent it in the air, we hear it in the anticipatory popping of crackers at the hands of young America, and we feel it in the demands upon our financial resources by those economical little people who annually "save up" for the Fourth. It is probable that the gentlemen who run the city will give us the usual modicum of fireworks and music, and issue the prudent proclamation against pin wheels, fire crackers, double-headers and so forth. "Our Jim," who has succeeded in co-ercing us into giving him eight hours work, is already preparing for the glorious day. As James has only been working six hours all along, we could not understand why he struck for eight hours, but we presume it was because he was anxious to be known as a striker; and presumed that he was bettering himself, whereas we get two hours more work out of this insane eight hours' striker by his injudicious move.

IT IS TO BE HOPED that a welcome home of the right sort will be extended to the Atalantas, on their return from England. When men try their best to win, and fail, let them be encouraged for the efforts they have made.

GOING ABROAD.—Our fashionable summer resorts are very likely to have their business curtailed this season by the departure for Europe of thousands of "the wealth, beauty and fashion" of the country. Every steamer leaving this port of late has been crowded with passengers, all bent on a trip to England and the continent. Not only is this ocean travel detrimental to the interests of Long Branch, Newport, Cape May, Saratoga, the Catskills, etc., but hundreds of our people are weekly making their way by the Pacific railroad to San Francisco, the Yosemite valley and other points of interest on the great western slope, and this also threatens to be a drawback to the business of the places we have named.

ANOTHER FRAUD.—In Oregon, lately, a man sued the father of his wife for $5,000 damages because she had been sick ever since their marriage. This is right, and the jury ought to give the damages sued for. There's too many frauds of this kind being played on confiding man by fathers who want to get their daughters off their hands, and an example in heavy damages is necessary to put a stop to the business. "The iron heel," etc., has been on our necks too long.

THE COLLEGE OF NEW JERSEY'S 125th Annual Commencement exercises begin on June 23d and close on the 26th. On the 25th, the gymnastic exhibition by the students, under the direction of the superintendent, Mr. George Goldie, will take place in the gymnasium, from 9 to 10½ o'clock A. M., and will be open to the public without tickets. Thus the Solonic adage, mens sana in sana corpore, will be practically exemplified.

THE COMMENTS of a portion of the London press on the rowing of the Atalanta crew was rather ungenerous considering that the Americans traveled three thousand miles to pull the race, and that they had their American-built boat destroyed on a British steamer through the failure of the officers of that vessel to fulfil their promise to the builder to see that she was well taken care of.

GREEN APPLES and other unripe fruit will soon appear on the street stands, and, as a natural consequence, obituary notices about "we had a little Johnny once," will become more plentiful.

to attach restrictions would defeat the contest of much of its interest to the public at large. The committee announce that the second class four oared race is open only to amateurs, from which we infer that they have overlooked the fact that competition for money prizes makes an oarsman A professional; consequently, amateur oarsmen, as a matter of fact, cannot be expected to enter in the four-oared races are to be three miles in length, the cutter and single scull two miles, and the race between ferry boys one quarter of a mile. The committee request that in making entries all persons or crews will please be specific in naming the class under which they wish to enter; also name their boats, designate the garments who will row or sail them in the race, and their colors. In the four-oared races the names of the crew must be given at the time of entry, and no individual will be allowed to row in both. None but full outrigged boats will be permitted to go in the four-oared races, and crews may row with or without a coxswain at their own option. Entries will be received from the present time up to June 26th. The members of the committee are as follows:—Thomas Keen, chairman; Earl D. Berry, secretary; Ald. John Kelly, Ald. Frank Sears, Ald. Geo. W. Zink.

SCHARFF AND BUTLER.

The proposition made through our columns by the West End Club, of Boston, to match Butler against Billy Scharff to row another five-miler, any time subsequent to the 4th proximo, has brought the subjoined communication from the McKeeites:—

EAST BIRMINGHAM, Pa., June 18th, 1872.

FRANK QUEEZ, Esq.—DEAR SIR.—Seeing in the Clipper of last week that T. C. Butler wishes another race with Scharff, we will accommodate him to row three or five miles at Pittsburgh, on the upper Monongahela course, the same that Ward and Hamill rowed over for $500, or much more if he wishes. We will have the race to take place any time between the 15th and 30th of July, but not at a stipulated weight. We will allow Mr. Butler $150 for his expenses to come here. The reason we ask him to come here is that we can make more money by it. Scharff is now in training, and on the 4th, and Scharff's business will not allow him time to go away from home after that until late in the fall, if at all. If this proves satisfactory, let the West End Club send on a forfeit, which we shall be pleased to stake. Hoping to receive an early reply, I am yours truly, JOHN A. BISACK, for the McKee Barge Club.

FRIENDSHIP BOAT CLUB REGATTA.—Wednesday, June 12th, was a gala day with the members of this east side boating organization, which includes in its list of members some of the most enterprising young Americans, and is composed of jolly good fellows all. Upon the date mentioned they held a pic-nic at Jones' Wood, the feature of the occasion being a single scull race, for the amateur championship of the East river, and a handsome gold medal. Three starters were made, viz.:—Thos. Allen, of the Friendships; James Smith, of Thirty-fourth street, and Wm. Wright, of Calmerie. The judges were James H. Biglin, Alderman Cornell, and Sergeant McGlynn, of the police force, being filled by Barney Biglin. They started from a stake-boat moored off the woods to Big Rock and repeat twice, making a distance of about four miles. At the signal Allen dashed away in the van, followed closely by Smith, Wright getting off in bad form. They continued on down the river, turning the rock in the order named, Allen with a good lead, which he maintained to the upper stake-boat, turning about ten lengths ahead of Smith, who was about five lengths ahead of Wright. After turning the stake-boat, Wright withdrew in consequence of his boat being full of water. The balance of the race was rowed without any difference in the relative positions, Allen winning the race handily in 26 min. This over, one and all turned their attention to the grand festivities and continued to thread the mazes until past midnight, when "homeward bound" was in order, all present having passed an afternoon and evening brimful of fun and happiness. The committee of arrangements, Phil. Bieglin, Patrick Boyle, Jas. Carroll, Jas. L. McCahill and Hugh D. McCullough, did all that lay in their power to ensure the comfort and enjoyment of these present, and are deserving of praise for the excellent manner in which all passed off under their supervision. Mattie Farrell, the silver-voiced tenor and president of the club, discharged the duties of floor manager most satisfactorily.

THE BIRD BOAT CLUB.—The Hudson river, at Annandale, N. Y., was the scene of a regatta on June 8th, the participants thereto having been members of the Bird Boat Club, of Bingham's Corners. The sport commenced with a scrub race for pair-oared boats, with coxswain, manned by the following crews:—Star—W. H. Holiday, stroke; O. W. Scully, No. 1; E. E. Pettee, coxswain. Frances—O. Archdeacon, stroke; J. W. Knight, No. 1; O. G. Coffin, coxswain. Agnes—O. W. Raeburn, stroke; H. C. Searing, No. 1; E. George, coxswain. Undine—T. J. Mackay, stroke; O. Tilliford, No. 1; A. Morris, coxswain. They rowed one mile and the Agnes came off victorious, the Frances being second. A foul occurred between the latter and the Star, and as the crew of the last named refused to row over, the judges decided the Frances the entitled to second place. The Undine rowed out of the outrigger at the start, and were compelled to withdraw. A six-oared barge race followed, between the Miramonte and Rosalia. The course down to turning-stakes and back was a mile and a quarter, and the crews by the following boats: Miramonte, 1 min. 39 sec; Rosalie, 9 min. 30 sec. Both boats had a fair start, the Rosalie in the first twenty-five strokes parting herself ahead by two boat-lengths, but the Miramonte, with a long, steady stroke, after the first mile of rowing, slowly gained, turning the stake-boat ten seconds ahead, and gained five seconds on the home-stretch, coming in ahead fifteen seconds, without a single spurt.

BOSTON CITY REGATTA.—For years the Hub of the universe has taken the lead in the matter of aquatic celebrations of one kind or another, and the present season will be no exception to the various parts of the country exhibiting their skill in friendly contests on the Charles river on the "Glorious Fourth." The carnival promises to be no less attractive this year than formerly, as an excellent programme is being arranged by the committee, prizes being offered which will make it worth while to go from a distance to row. Here it is:—First race, for Whitehall boats—first prize, $100; second prize, $30; two miles. Second race, for single scull shells—first prize, $100; second prize, $30; two miles. Third race, for four oared working boats—first prize, $100; second prize, $50; three miles. Fourth race, for double sculls—first prize, $100; second prize, $30; two miles. Fifth race, for four oared shells—outriggers—first prize, $400; second prize, $300; six miles. A goose race will occur before the regular races are commenced, in order to keep the sandbags in good humor while awaiting the close. Whoever of the score of all contestants in the goose race will receive a prize of $75, and a second prize of $50 will also be awarded. The distance will be about 300rd. The judges selected are Dr. John F. Cheever, John C. Gardner, N. P. Wells, James Fitzgerald, J. P. Mahar, Charles H. McCarthy and John W. Frazar.

REGATTA OF THE COLUMBIA YACHT CLUB.—This metropolitan club held their spring regatta on the Hudson river on Wednesday, June 12th, over a course of about twenty miles, being from a stake-boat anchored off the club house, foot of 87th street to and around a stake-boat off Fort Lee, thence to a stake-boat off the coal docks at Weehawken and back to the place of starting, to be sailed twice over. The entries were as follows:—Cabin sloops—Elizabeth, Rowe and Frolic. First class open sloops—Journeyman, Ellie and George E. Sherman; second class, open, Georgia, Craftsman and Maggie. The club had chartered the steamer Fort Lee, which was well filled with members and invited guests. At 11.17 the booming of the cannon from the deck of the Fort Lee gave the signal to be off, and the saucy-looking water craft were quick to respond, the Sherman assuming the foremost position, which was never wrested from her, she arriving at the home stake-boat at 4.07.30, followed by the Frolic, Journeyman, Ellie, Rowe, Germania and Craftsman, the latter having met with a mishap, which disabled her. The Frolic won the prize for cabin sloops, and the Sherman that for first class open sloops. The regatta committee was composed of Commodore Jos. Wheeler, R. Wilson, W. Van Orden, M. Buckley, Judge Connolly and E. Adams, jr.

ELLIS WARD VS. J. J. O'LEARY.—Deep interest is felt in the approaching trial of prowess at the oar between the above men, both of whom have been backing to their work very energetically during the past couple of weeks. Ward has been training at his home on Charles's, a hotel at the landing, Sing Sing, N. Y., and is doing considerable work to secure physical fitness for the encounter. He will remain there until the 23d inst., when he will journey to Worcester, Mass., at the race is to take place on Wednesday, June 26th, on Lake Quinsigamond. He will be accompanied by Young Ten Eyck, of Troy (who is now with him and will pull in the Boston 4th of July regatta), Hank Ward (Ward's brother) and a host of others from this city and up the Hudson. The second deposits, $300 a side, was duly posted on the 15th inst. in the hands of Mr. Hamilton, and everything promises well for all exciting contests. O'Leary is hard at work to fit from the fact that the winner will, in all probability, aspire to the title of "Champion Sculler of America."

LOUISVILLE VS. CINCINNATI.—A match has been arranged between Fred. Wolf, of Louisville, Ky., and Henry Weaver, Cincinnati's favorite oarsman. The race will be rowed over a five mile course, in open boats, on the 6th of July, for $500 a side. Both boats are to be built at Louisville, under the supervision of Wolf, and when completed Weaver is to have first choice of same. Wolf will at once go into training at Louisville, until a week before the race, when he will go to Portkopolis, and take up his quarters at the boat house of the Pope Barge Club. Weaver, in the meantime, will go into active training at Cincinnati, and no doubt will give the Falls City boy a hard rub. It is expected that a large crowd will be in attendance to witness the race, as it is the first match ever rowed between the two rival cities.

ALCYONE CLUB REGATTA.—This boating organization inaugurated their season on June 15th, when a six-oared race between the crews of the Brunette, Blonde, and Bachelor, took place over a straight away three mile course off Bay Ridge, L. I. The race was won by the first named by nearly a length, the Bachelor being some two lengths behind the Blonde. A tub race followed, which didn't amount to anything, after which the members of the club and their guests, including many ladies and gentlemen, boarded the steamer E. C. Schultz and Pleasant Valley, proceeded to Fort Hamilton, where the prizes were presented by Horatio C. King, a colonel "in the air-my," and several hours were devoted to worship at the shrine of Terpsichore.

INTERNATIONAL REGATTA ON LAKE ERIE.—The yacht-ing regatta to be held at Put-in Bay, Lake Erie, on June 19th, 20th and 21st, under the auspices of the International Regatta Association, the following prizes are announced for competition:—First day—1st prize, $125 and a silk flag inscribed "Champion Yacht," 2d, $75; 3d, $25. Second day—1st prize, $75; 2d, $50; 3d, $30. The third day's race is for boats not competing for prizes on the previous days, and on that day there will not be any restrictions in regard to canvas. The prizes are $20, $25 and $10.

THE PAPE BARGE CLUB, of the City of Pork, have received their new uniform, consisting of white tight-fitting shirts, trimmed with blue, and having an anchor embroidered in the same color on the breast, white flunel knee breeches, blue stockings, canvas slippers, light straw sailor hats and white silk hand-kerchiefs with blue edging. This will improve their appearance and increase the attraction of the next regatta.

ROYAL THAMES YACHT CLUB.—The channel match of this London, Eng., club took place on June 12th. The course was from the Nore to Dover. The Egeria came in first, but by the time allowance the Fiona, which was second, was awarded the prize. The Kriemhilda was disabled during the race, and towed into port by a tug.

ROBT. FULTON went from St. John, N. B., to Digby, on June 13th, to practice over the course chosen for his coming race with Brown, of Halifax, which is fixed for July 8th. Brown has been working hard for some time at the Four Mile House, near Halifax.

J. A. CLAXTON CANY, Benj. Deans, Aug. Russ, C. E. Folsom and Chas. A. Hayden have been appointed judges, and authorized to arrange the details of the Boston Fourth of July Regatta, to take place at City Point.

BILL SMITH, of the Jones Club, and Ed. Powell, of the Columbia, are again matched to row three miles, for $200 a side, on the Allegheny river, at Pittsburgh, Pa., on June 22d.

JOHN WARD and the Biglin brothers can obtain letters by calling at this office.

THE RING.

COLLINS AND THE UNKNOWN.—We received a note from Jim Collins on the 14th inst., in reference to the articles for the proposed match between him and some person to be named by George Seddons. He objected to the time fixed therein for the fight to take place, as also the locality mentioned, saying that he wished it to come off in Canada, and not less than three months from signing. Seddons called in during the day, and after being informed of this, concluded to give way, whereupon fresh articles were drawn up, offering the time and place in accordance with Jim's wishes. These were forwarded by that evening's mail, but as nothing had been heard from Collins, up to the hour of going to press, we infer that he did not receive them in season to submit of his replying on the 17th. His desires having been complied with in the matter, he has no ground for further objection, and we feel assured that the articles have been signed by him, and will be received during the current week.

A WRESTLING AND BOXING MATINEE is advertised to take place at Harry Hill's, 38 East Houston street, on the afternoon of Thursday, June 20th, commencing at 3 o'clock. Brown-ing, Ellis, Doyle, Askey, Smith, Elliott, Lane and McCormack are announced to wrestle in the Devonshire and other styles for $250 and two silver cups, while a number of fistic encounters will exhibit their prowess with the stuffed buckskins, and the regular company will appear in an olio of singing, dancing, instrumental music, negroisms, comic acts, etc.

BILLY FLYNN is up for a benefit at the Arbor, Seddons and Chambers' resort of the fancy on West Houston street, on Saturday, June 22d. He will give the wind-up with George Seddons.

THE MATCH alluded to sometime since as having been made between Johnny Lazarus and an unknown (who was, however, well known), at Philadelphia, has fallen through. Lack of funds is understood to have been the cause of this result.

WE HAVE LETTERS for Butt Riley, Tom McAlpine and Patsy Hogan.

BILLIARDS.

MATCH FOR $500 A SIDE.—There was a match game of billiards played on the evening of the 14th, at Wm. Dodd's saloon, Birmingham, Pa., between Harry Lysle, of East Liberty, and Ed. Case, of Pittsburgh, 1,200 points up, on a carom table, Lysle giving the odds of 200 points, for $500 a side, and it proved to be one of the best betting games ever played in that neighborhood. It commenced at 8 o'clock, but before they reached 300 Lysle made a big run and was some 40 points ahead, when 2 and 3 to 1 was offered on him and taken in almost every instance. Here Case made three runs in succession of 31, 117 and 128, and took the lead, which he retained to the end, winning by 50 points. The fourth time Case has received odds in 1,500 point games (two with Harry Warren and one with John McAller, each for $250 a side, at either which he beat his opponents even. His largest run was 287.—Lysle's, of.

DEERY VS. GARNIER.—A MATCH FOR $1,000 A SIDE.—Albert Garnier and John Deery, both at present in Chicago, have at last succeeded in making a match, after long and tedious negotiations, for a certain amount named by each party, and the terms of the forfeit duly complied with. Some time ago Deery offered to play Garnier at the horse-ball game, the contest to take place in this city. On the 15th Garnier, through his representative, offered to play Deery anywhere, on any table, and for any amount. A brief correspondence then ensued, in the course of which Garnier offered to play Deery anywhere, on any table, and for any amount. A brief correspondence then ensued, in the course of which Garnier offered to play Deery anywhere, on any table, and for any amount.

ATHLETIC vs. BALTIMORE.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

The third championship game between these clubs was played at Philadelphia on June 17th. About five thousand persons were present, and their conduct was all that could be desired. The Athletics by good batting, assisted materially by fielding errors of Radcliff, Fisler and others, scored fourteen runs, earning two in the last contest.

The Baltimores secured an unearned run in the third inning and, by good batting, earned two runs in the eighth inning. Craver was injured in the last innings by a foul ball hitting him in the face, and Wingham caught in his place. The Athletic batting was almost perfect, only Gedney being retired. McBride's fine play in his position. A dead ball was used. The umpiring of Mr. Lennon was strictly impartial and satisfactory. The score was as follows:

ATHLETIC vs. ATLANTIC.

On the afternoon of Saturday, the 15th inst. the Atlantics, of Brooklyn, played the first of their championship series with the Athletics, of Philadelphia, on the ground of the latter. But little publicity had been given to this game, yet the attendance must have been close upon a thousand persons, and as many more would have been present had they anticipated that such a fine exhibition of the beauties of the game was in store for them. Both nines had their strongest teams, the Athletic managers refraining from the home play of Meyerle and Pike, and substituting Fleming and Fairfield in their positions. This change worked very well, Malone's catching being excellent, but his throwing was weak, while McGeary, at short stop, visibly demonstrated that he is a tower of strength in that position.

The Atlantics went first to the bat, and after their first two strikers had been retired by Malone and McGeary, Barlow, amid much laughter and applause, "chocked" a ball directly in front of the home plate, and reached the first base before the ball did. His good luck, however, deserted him here, as in attempting to steal to second he was put out by Malone's good throw to Pike. Thus encouraged, Wood hit safely, but the next striker was thrown out by Barlow, scored two runs after two hands were out, McBride and Malone making their bases on clear hits, and subsequently scoring runs.

Both nines were blanked in the next two innings, Britt being the only one to reach first base, and that on an error, excusable, however, while Ferguson put four of the six men out, catching brilliantly every hard hit that came from Mack and Meyerle, on one of which he made a double play. Hardcastle in the third innings of the Atlantics with a safe one-base hit to short centre field. The next two strikers, Barlow and Dehiman, were put out at first base by Ferguson, striking left-handed, made a fine hit that Fisler failed to hold, and the consequence was that the error was that Burdock made the first, and as it afterwards proved to be the last run made by the Atlantics in the game.

In the fifth innings, the first after the first striker, McGeary, had been put out by Britt's assistance at first base, Mack and Outhbert were given lives by Ferguson, and the result was that before the third hand could be disposed of no less than four runs were added to the score by earnest batting by a five two-base hit. Hall, of the Atlantics, had made one base by a clean hit in this innings, but was "doubled-up" along with Meaks in the latter's hit to Fisler, the cool and confident manner in which Fisler made this double play being loudly applauded.

The Atlantics failed to score in the last four innings, Hall and Burdock being their only men on first base, and then, by error of Anson and Fisler, Meyerle made three good catches at right field in these innings. In the sixth a one base hit by McGeary and a couple of difficult catches missed by Remsen gave the Atlantics four runs, which were the last scored by Hall taking, jumping, with one hand, a very hard hit liner from Meyerle's bat, and by means of which McBride was "doubled up" before he could get back to second. In the eighth innings McGeary and Mack's base hit was one base and scored runs, but one being earned, as Cuthbert was muffed by Dehiman. The wily Cuthbert, however, paid the penalty of attempting to steal third by going out at that point. In the last innings Meyerle again made a second base—the time by a fair foul hit to left field—and he scored an earned run for the Athletics.

The Atlantics were very weak at the bat, but rather surprised the Athletics by the sharp manner in which they fielded. Ferguson's play at third being a noteworthy feature, and McDonald should be favorably mentioned for a couple of difficult catches, and Hall for his fine catch. The Athletics played their usual fine fielding game, excelling in the first innings, and materially lending assistance to Mack and Malone. McGeary and Mack also deserve mention for their fielding. Meyerle made some good catches in the out-field. We append the score:—

CLEVELAND vs. MUTUAL.

The second game in the championship series between the Cleveland and Mutual clubs was played on the Capitoline grounds, on the 15th of June. One of the largest crowds which ever attended a game of ball in Brooklyn was present, and the enthusiasm and excitement was intense, the players of both nines being impartially applauded. At the end of the second innings the score for Cleveland looked decidedly unfavorable, standing 3 to 0 in favor of the Mutuals, but in the third they scored six runs, and thereafter led until the close. Game was called at 3.15, the Forest Citys at the bat, and Mr. Ed. Volts, of Philadelphia, officiated as umpire. Cummings commenced with a series of wild pitches, giving Hastings his base on called balls. He retrieved this, however, for the next man at the bat, Holdsworth, struck out. Wolters and White followed, each making a safe hit, but Hastings went out at first by running on a foul. Simmons struck to Hatfield, and, of course, was fielded out at first, thus leaving Cleveland a goose egg. Then Mack and Meyerle, of the Eagle and Hatfield both went out at first. Start struck safe, and Bechtel tipped up a fly, which was dropped by Fabor. Hicks struck a beauty into left field, earning second and bringing Start and Bechtel home. Boyd then made a daisy cutter, which was gathered in by Simmons at first, and the side was out with two runs, neither of which was earned. Sweasy, Sutton and Fabor each sent up easy flys—the two former to Eggler and the latter to Hatfield—thus giving Cleveland another goose egg. The Mutuals in this innings again scored, but only one, in consequence of two errors by Sweasy. Pratt picked up the ash for the Clevelands, and sent an easy grounder into Pearce's hands, going out at first. Hastings followed with a sky scraper into left field, on which he earned second. Holdsworth, Walters and White earned a base apiece. White's hit brought Holdsworth to the home plate and Wolters scored on a muff by Hicks. Simmons then took first on a wild throw by Boyd, and White tallied. Sweasy got first on called balls and Sutton on an error by Pearce. The bases were now full, and Charley Fabor seemed to appreciate the moment's importance, for he drove a beautiful liner into right field, earning first himself and bringing Simmons home. Pratt forced out Sweasy at the home plate, but, Hastings striking safe, Sutton tallied. Holdsworth then struck out on a foul fly by Hicks, and the Clevelands retired with six runs to their credit, three of which were earned. This was the turning point in the game. The Mutuals only tallied one more run in the entire game, and Cleveland was content to pocket three goose eggs in succession, when they succeeded in getting in another run. The best display of batting was in the ninth innings when Cleveland batted for six first bases and four runs. The following is a batting table:—Of the range we share and effective on both sides, Jim White especially distinguishing himself by taking several difficult fouls. One catch in particular was one of the most remarkable on record, being a foul bound, for which he was obliged to run a long distance and then only for success in holding it. It was beautifully judged and beautifully caught, and elicited a hearty round of applause. The score:—

STAR vs. KNICKERBOCKER.

The Star Club, of Brooklyn, with their new amateur nine, put in an appearance in a match game for the first time this season on June 15th, on the Capitoline grounds, Brooklyn, L. I., when they had the veteran amateurs of the New York Knickerbockers as their opponents. The Knicks went over to Brooklyn for fun and exercise, and they had both, especially the latter, as that excitable "vet" Davis can fully testify, for the way the Stars sent him traveling after long balls at right field was a caution to base ball pedestrianism. The Stars went into the heavy hitting business in regular Athletic style, the score at the 8th innings standing at 23 to 5 in their favor. The Knicks pulled up a little in the latter part of the game, however, but the Stars were too much for them, the final score leaving the Brooklyn nine the victors by the mirth score of 40 to 14. THE POET AND THE PROOF READER.

Ah! here it is! I'm famous now—
An author and a poet!
It really is in print! Yo gods!
How proud I'll be to show it;
And gentle Anne—what a thrill
Will animate her breast,
To read these ardent lines, and know
To whom they are addressed.

Why, bless my soul! here's something strange;
What can the paper mean
By talking of the graceful brooks
That gander o'er the green?
And here's a t instead of r,
While makes it uppling rill;
We'll seek the shad, instead of shade,
And hell, instead of hill.

They look so—what? I recollect,
'Twas sweet and then 'twas kind,
And now to think, the stupid fool,
For bland has printed blind?
Was ever such provoking work?
'Tis curious, by-the-by,
How anything is rendered blind
By giving it an eye.

Hast thou no tears? the r's left out,
Hast thou no ears, instead;
I hope that thou art dear, is pat
I hope that thou art dead.
Who ever saw in such a space
So many blunders crammed?
Those gentle eyes bedimmed, is spelt
Those gentle eyes bedammed.

The color of the rose, is nose;
Affection is affliction;
I wonder if dat thickness holds
In fact as well as diction?
Then art a friend, the r is gone—
Who ever would have deemed
That such a trifling thing could change
A friend into a fiend?

Then art the same, is rendered lame—
It really is too hard!
And here, because an i is out,
My lovely maid is mad;
They drove her blind, by poking in
An r—a gruesome spear;
And now they've gouged it out again,
And made her crazy too.

Let's stop and recapitulate;
I've told her she's a lunatic,
And blind, and deaf and lame.
Was ever such a horrid bash
In poetry or prose?
I've said she was a fiend, and praised
The color of her nose.

I wish I had that editor
Locked in a cell for half a minute;
I'd bang him so he'd never get's content
And with an h begin it;
I'd jam his body, eyes and bones,
And cram it with a d—
And then I'd shut him in a hill of his—
He spells it with an e.

THE OLD WAR ELEPHANT "ROMEO."

HIS LIFE AND DEATH.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

"He sleeps his last sleep,
He has fought his last battle,
No sound shall awake him
To glory again."

In last week's CLIPPER we published a brief notice of the death of the old elephant Romeo, but the following communication from a correspondent who knows whereof he speaks, gives some further particulars, which are doubtless authentic.

Forepaugh's large elephant "Romeo" is no more. He died in the city of Chicago on the morning of Friday, June 7th, 1872, at five minutes after 11 o'clock. George Forepaugh, his keeper, observed the huge form quivering; he rushed to do what he had at that time could be done—nothing. The vast carcass rocked to and fro; the limbs, colossal in size and herculean in strength, began to stiffen, and refused to bear their accustomed burden; the fan-like ears fell; the wonderful trunk dropped; the eye, which had witnessed encounters on Indian soil between Hindoo and mighty rajah—that had looked on a hundred sawdust arenas, and had gazed with delight on the infinite prairies of the Western world; that eye, that had taken in the wonders of a hundred years, became glazed and went out in darkness; and, what had once been a citadel of invulnerable power, quaked at the approach of "the pale horseman," and, amid the fear of the beasts and the consternation of men, "Romeo," the mighty, but mortal, reeled, and with a tremendous shock fell to rise no more.

"Romeo" had been ailing for some time past in his legs, and a few days ago Professors Boyd and Withers, of the Chicago Medical College, were called in by Mr. Forepaugh, and a difficult surgical operation was performed upon the animal's fore legs. Large pieces of flesh were cut away, handful after handful of putrifaction was brought to the surface, and, after cutting and gouging for two hours, both legs were cauterized with a red hot iron and the surgeons left him. During all this time the huge animal displayed only the noblest qualities of fortitude, seeming to be convinced that the terrible operations were to redound to his own good.

In 1864 the menagerie belonging to Jeremiah Mable was sold to Messrs. John O'Brien and Adam Forepaugh, and when, a year or two after, these gentlemen dissolved partnership, Mr. O'Brien took the smaller elephant, while Mr. Forepaugh kept "Romeo," and has had him ever since. In 1858, in the city of New Orleans, "Romeo" killed his first keeper, known as "Long John," and in 1867, on the farm of James Miller, at Hatborough, 16 miles from Philadelphia, he killed Bill Williams. Last winter he made an attack on his last keeper, George Forepaugh, but did not seriously injure him. Since then the animal has shown none of his vicious qualities, and when the time in his life, quietly submitted to being carried on the cars with the company, a thing which could never have before be done, as no inducement could get him upon a car. As he lay dead in the pavilion, in Chicago, he was visited by thousands, many shedding tears over the dead old hero. On the morning of June 8th, "Romeo" was laid in state with all his rich trappings upon him, and, as many eminent citizens of Chicago, and all the members of the company gathered about Prof. Tony Franks' band executed Beyel's Hymn and the Dead March from "Saul." The scene was very impressive, and the last affected person in the assemblage was Adam Forepaugh, though nearly all others stood with tears in their eyes. That night, at the conclusion of the exhibition, the professors of the Chicago medical college, the members of the press, and a few invited persons gathered in the menagerie tent, and "Romeo," the hero of a century, was dissected and carried away to be preserved and placed on exhibition. Mr. Forepaugh having presented his remains to the city of Chicago. "Romeo" was a fine performing elephant; in fact, one of the best in the country; in his vicious moments his spleen was expended on his keepers, but he never injured a stranger, and while a little child could fondle him with impunity, it was dangerous for any member of the company to take liberties with him. The money value of "Romeo" was as nothing in comparison to his attractiveness as a drawing card, for almost every person in the country knew him, and though the brave, stately old hero, has gone, Mr. Forepaugh will soon have another large elephant, which he is already negotiating for.

Chicago, June 9th, 1872. KIT CLARKE.

In this connection, as a matter of information and interest, we give the following detailed account of the terrible operation referred to, which we find in the Chicago Times:—

MAMMOTH SURGICAL OPERATION.

THE ELEPHANT ROMEO UNDER THE KNIFE—TUNNELLING HIS FLESH WITH RED-HOT CROWBARS—THE ANIMAL QUIVERING WITH PAIN.

The most colossal surgical operation ever performed upon a living creature was witnessed by a select few in this city on Tuesday, June 4th. The elephant Romeo, of Forepaugh's menagerie and circus, was the subject. Having two weeks to stay in Chicago, Mr. Forepaugh determined to place Romeo in the hands of a surgeon. With this purpose in view he called on Dr. H. W. Boyd, Professor of Surgery and Anatomy of the Chicago Medical College, who has had some experience in elephantine surgery, having dissected two or three of these monsters, and who is now engaged in setting up the great carcass of the famous Hannibal in the museum of the college. The professor consented, and, accompanied by Mr. R. J. Withers, a veterinary surgeon, made his appearance at the menagerie.

Having got Romeo in proper position, the surgeons opened their tool chest, and lighting a brisk fire in a furnace secured for the occasion, rolled up their sleeves and literally "went in." One of the Forepaugh brothers, who has charge of the elephants, placed himself in front of Romeo with a couple of pitchforks, and another, an assistant keeper, took charge of his trunk by attaching several handspikes to it. Dr. Withers knelt before his victim, and in another moment several pounds of elephant steak were sent thunder whizzing through the tent, bringing every animal in the menagerie to the chorus, and for a minute or two it seemed as if all the elephants had broken loose. In the pandemonium Romeo was the first to recover his presence, being assisted in his task by many well-directed and pointed arguments.

The next thrust brought only a quiver over the huge carcass, and after that, during three mortal hours of terrible pain, the dumb giant displayed only the noblest qualities of fortitude, surroundings of the animal soon presented the appearance of an old-fashioned slaughter house.

Again and again, under the direction of Prof. Boyd, Dr. Withers cut, gouged, tunnelled and chiseled into the poor beast, each time cutting away or digging out a pound or two of putrid flesh, and each time the knife or other tool was withdrawn the blood flowed copiously after it. Like a practised mariner the doctor only prospected for awhile, feeling his way to the cre where he would laid bare a member, and then entered upon a task that sickened the stoutest sawbones present. Having exposed the seats of corruption he began to scoop them out, bringing a handful after handful to the surface. Tunnelling his way along by many a serpentine track, until the sound flesh was reached, he then began to dig out, and chisels, his arm would enter the animal's leg to the elbow, until the sound flesh was reached. It was not long before the explorer discovered that what sound bone and flesh there was in Romeo's fore legs wasn't worth speaking about, and only wonder was that the animal was alive and able to stand on his legs.

After a full hour spent in slashing, gouging and scraping, during which the poor beast was rid of 15 or 20 pounds of putrified matter and flesh, and a pound or two of bone, the surgeons concluded that sufficient for a day might be the verdict, and desisted from that part of the operation to enter upon another tenfold more painful and harrowing. Both legs had been cauterized, and in many cases where the openings were directly opposite but slight integuments and fractions of bones prevented a meeting. While these excavations had been progressing, men were busy at the furnace heating huge soldering irons, several inches in diameter, to a white heat. These were now brought into requisition to remove the proud flesh.

When Dr. Withers approached the animal with the first of these glowing irons, a shiver ran through his frame, and he was disposed to resent any further aggression, but being convinced by the pointed arguments of his keeper that it was all for his good, he laid aside his low thunder, which was echoed from every cage, and straightened his trunk and braced himself for further martyrdom.

The red hot iron was now ran into tunnel No. 1 to the length of about a foot, and a hissing sound, followed by dense volumes of fumes and an intolerable stench, issued from the opening. The distance, but soon settled into quietness again. Another red hot iron was introduced, again there was a quiver of the whole frame, but this time he only drew up his back and changed his position a trifle.

The blood now began to flow from the caverns in copious supply, a sight that made all the animals of the cat species desperate, and lions, tigers, leopards, hyenas, panthers, wolves, and others of the innumerable horde whose cages formed a circle about the menagerie, joined in low growls, which were intensified to roars and shrieks as the fumes of the burning flesh filled their nostrils. The tumult caused a score or two of keepers to rush for the dens of their pets in their respective charge; and as these added their not the source was still further aggravated by cudgels and other persuasive things calculated to stir up the animals, the hue and cry was terrific, attracting hundreds of people from the neighborhood, who surrounded the tents, though in momentary fear that a deluge of uncaged wild beasts would come upon them. But against any such catastrophe the strong cages were proof.

When the din and noise was somewhat quieted, the operation was proceeded with, and during the two following hours above fifty red irons were thrust into the poor beast's carcass. When the surgeons finally desisted it was not because their believed their task completed, but because the caverns had assumed such dimensions that the two inch irons proved too small to be further effective. Besides, Romeo was evidently weakening and getting a little "groggy" from loss of three pailfuls of blood. Dr. Boyd estimating that he had lost about three pailfuls during the operation. The openings were then thoroughly washed with lotions, and afterward carefully bound up. The surgeons expressed strong hopes of his recovery, but he died on Friday.

QUESTIONABLE ADVICE.—At a marriage lately in Maine the bride's voice faltered, and she paused in the midst of the impressive ceremony. Her little niece, a bright fittle three-year old, thinking the naughty minister was compelling poor aunty to say something disagreeable, stamped her little foot and exclaimed, in a tone of authority, "Auntie, don't go thay it."

ADDRESS

WRITTEN BY
JONAS B. PHILLIPS, ESQ.
SPOKEN BY MR. T. S. HAMBLIN, ON THE OCCASION OF THE Opening of the Rebuilt Old Bowery Theatre,
MONDAY EVENING, MAY 6TH, 1839.

As one whom destiny at last restores,
After long exile, to his native shores,
Returns with swelling heart to some lov'd spot,
Through changeful years at still cherish'd, unforgot—
So I, once more beneath this classic dome,
Greet my old friends, and feel myself at home!
I pray a welcome all, with joyous heart;
Yet if, perchance, no welcome be,
Or should pause awhile, with doubtful brow,
Indulge me, friends, I am no actor now.
This is no night of honest pride,
'Twould be in vain to check the swelling tide
Of varied feelings which within me rise.
And call the grateful moisture to mine eyes.
The time, the scene, the friends around me, all
A thousand memories at once recall;
Which, like the plant that never knows decay,
Did not, till life itself hath passed away.
First, when with smiles ye bade me welcome here,
And spurred my bold, adventurous career;
When nightly throngs with rapture's breath approv'd,
Till malice nor envy's venom'd arrows threw,
To blight the hopes inspired by you.
The midnight felon, with unerring hand,
With stealthy step and hell-enkindled brand,
Unseen, unknown, and undetected, came,
And twice envelop'd in devouring flame
The temple taste and enterprise had rear'd,
To talent consecrate, to ye endeared.
Change we the scene—the clouds have passed away,
I hail the dawning of a brighter day;
Depress'd but crush'd not, let me proudly own,
The darts of malice have been vainly thrown.
Again I welcome ye, beneath this dome—
Your favor'd spot—my dear "Old House at home!"
Yes, it is old, though everything looks bright
Fresh from the artist's hands, first seen to-night;
Old, from the treasured memories it brings—
Old, from the love which around it clings.
Say, shall it prosper? Answer with your hands.
I promise now to meet your just demands—
To cater faithfully, and hope to find
Much to delight and cultivate the mind.
To bid young genius kind welcome here,
Foster its growth, and guard its proud career.
Such shall be my task, here now so many claim
A share of public patronage and fame;
Yet I will venture fearlessly, sor yes!
To ask another "Richmond in the field,"
In honorable efforts to retain
The favor which I humbly hope to gain.
Never were omens of success more bright
Than these I hail on this triumphant night.
Familiar faces, friends unchanged and true,
On every side, now greet my raptur'd view;
Their joyous, well known voices, meet mine ears,
Hearts that ne'er failed a friend in time of need.
Sustain'd by whom, I must, I will succeed.

CUPID'S FOIBLES, FOLLIES AND FANCIES.

WHEN I MET HER.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

I met her not where courtly throng
Bent blindly down at Fashion's shrine,
Nor where the jest, the laugh, the song,
Were mingled with the ruby wine;
Where the sweet music, soft and low,
Played for the dancers flushed and hot,
Whirling in waltzes; no, ah! no,
Amid such scenes I met her not!

I met her not where gladsome mirth
Sped on her merry, laughing hours;
Where bright lights burned, and where the earth
Seemed made of sunshine and of flowers;
This daughter of fair Erin's land
I did not meet—I'll tell you where—
On Broadway, at a peanut stand!

THE REV. HUSTON SCANDAL CASE.

In our last issue we gave the ruling of the ecclesiastical court before which the reverend gentleman was tried in Baltimore, viz., that he was "guiltless of all the charges." Whether he is or not, and whether said ruling is correct, we, of course, are unable to decide. The Baltimore American, of the 11th inst., however, publishes a statement alleged to have been written in March last by Mary Driscoll, which gives more full evidence than her verbal testimony, so far as published, although about the same tone and character, which, therefore, and because of its length, it is not necessary for us to repeat. A summing up thereof, however, as given in an editorial headed "Let Us Have the Testimony," in the same issue, we here quote:—

We publish to-day the first instalment of the testimony for the prosecution in the late trial of the Rev. L. D. Huston, before the ecclesiastical committee. This statement was prepared by the little girl who is generally designated as "the Sunday school scholar," shortly after the scandal was first made public, and a copy of it has been in our possession ever since. If Dr. Huston had been convicted we should not have published it; since he has been acquitted the friends of those wronged children are thrown upon the defensive, and we shall do what we can to show that they are not perjurers. The charges and specifications, as far as they related to this child, were framed upon this statement. The legal gentlemen of the county and some who were not of the court, insisted that the acts of adultery must be specifically set forth, time, place and circumstance being mentioned, and that no testimony be received except such as related to these the most convincing character was shut out. An old woman, a great deal of whose relations to Dr. Huston have been the colored girl whose principal witness being the colored servant of many years. She is the mother of two children, whose paternity is frequently canvassed. Some assistance was derived from a boy lately returned from the House of Refuge, who was sent there by his father for incorrigible conduct, and family we are unwilling further to wound by publishing his name. In violation of one of the plainest rules which governs judicial proceedings, this last named boy was permitted to file an affidavit, the contents of which the little girl whom he slandered has never yet been permitted to see, and will probably have opportunity whatever to contradict. He himself was not before the committee. Unhappily for this child, she took Dr. Huston's advices, and accompanied young men on one or two occasions to houses of assignation in Baltimore. From this circumstance whatever was laid before the committee prejudicial to her character was derived. She produced a dozen of witnesses, neighbors, all of the highest respectability, who testified to her much warmth to her truthfulness in general, good reputation up to the time the dreadful story of her wrongs was divulged. If the defence have any better testimony than that which we have indicated we shall be glad to publish it. Above the court was hermitted to see. When it is printed we shall publish a column, with the entire affair which he gave to a young man some months ago, the public will have the opportunity of acquitted. We have no sympathy for Dr. Huston's conscience something about the evidence on which he was acquitted. We have no sympathy for those frantic people who were trying to suppress a dreadful truth lest it might throw a shadow over their own homes. Ye gods and lambkins, Dr. Huston's most energetic defenders were acting under this powerful motive! They persuaded themselves that one stricken household was enough, even though the truth should be crushed to the earth. We shall hereafter publish the testimony of other important witnesses for the prosecution, and will publish that for the defence also, if the witnesses will furnish it. The friends of the accused have sent garbled statements of the testimony over the country, misleading the public, and we shall do what we can to reach the truth."

Later advices inform us that on the 21st inst. the grand jury of the City Criminal Court of Baltimore presented Rev. L. D. Huston, D. D., for adultery, and the usual capias was issued for his arrest, if found within the jurisdiction of the sheriff of Baltimore city.

POPPING THE QUESTION.

A Young Physician Has a Matrimonial Patient.

A physician of this city went into his office some twelve months ago and found seated there a young and lovely lady, of cultivated manners and apparently of good character. The doctor at first thought her a patient and the view of sitting down and talking with the fair visitor. She said very little during the first few minutes, but her features more attractive. Half hesitating, yet charmed with the young beauty, the doctor began:—

"Well, miss, what can I do for you?"

The damsel did not seem at all confused, but throwing back her auburn curls and looking the doctor squarely in the eye, she replied:—

"You can marry me!"

Leap year had not commenced, and the M. D., though a young physician, was considerably nonplussed. The lady did not laugh or smile, or show any emotion. She was evidently in earnest, and awaited his answer with marked anxiety. A few minutes of painful suspense followed, in which neither of them spoke a word. He office will be open daily, from 10 o'clock, A. M. to 4, P. M. The distinguished legal gentlemen of the county and some who were not of the court, insisted that the acts of adultery must be specifically set forth, time, place and circumstance being mentioned, and that no testimony be received except such as related to these the most convincing character was shut out. Above all things, we should like to print the affidavit that nobody except the court was permitted to see. When it is printed we shall publish a column, with the entire affair which he gave to a young man some months ago, the public will have the opportunity of acquitted. Later advices inform us that on the 21st inst. the grand jury of the City Criminal Court of Baltimore presented Rev. L. D. Huston, D. D., for adultery, and the usual capias was issued for his arrest, if found within the jurisdiction of the sheriff of Baltimore city.

DIFFERENT OPINIONS ON WOMAN'S BEAUTY.—The Africans figure beauty as black or bronze, with swollen lips, and so make the lower lip more beautiful, some tribes render it pendulous, by attaching heavy jewels or weights through artificial holes. In Peru the longest ears are considered the handsomest, and as a great mark of beauty in the females. Some people stain their teeth black and some red, and in Basque the women do not consider themselves fit for brides until they have stained their heads close to the skin. The Mexican women rejoice in low foreheads and very thick heads of hair, the blacker the better, and the coarser it is the higher the appreciation, while the Italians venerate red, golden and light hair: the Spaniards fancy light, slender figures in their women; the Italians, on the contrary, are fond of full developements of limb and figure. The Orientals and Westerns are also at complete antipodes as to the manner in which they interpret beauty and what relates to it. The Eastern women use yellow cosmetics, while the French and English dread that tinge in their complexion. The Asiatic, whether of China or Siam, is delighted with the olive skin and high cheek bones of the Mongolian women. Thus the negro adores the thick lips, flat nose and ebony tint of his race, and did he indulge in art, could produce Venus with crisp hair, and his group of the graces would be of the color of basal. It will be remembered that a colored painter once exhibited a picture of a group of angels to Napoleon, in which every angel, wings and all, were as black as the ace of spades. The criterion of beauty is simply a matter of latitude and longitude, and that which we call ugliness is only a want of appreciation on our part, or rather it may be termed, misplaced beauty. The woman, therefore, who sets value on the public opinion of her personal charms and who is criticised for lack of them, has only to emigrate to that country where her peculiar style of beauty is in vogue.

AN AFFECTIONATE UNCLE.—The wife of Frank Watts, a well-to-do young farmer of Fitchburg, Mass., ran away, some four weeks since, with Frank's uncle, named John Smart and aged forty-five, and has been living with him in Albany as his wife ever since. Mr. Smart is the father of eleven children, and is evidently a fascinating man. Being Frank's uncle, moreover, Frank's wife evidently thought she was doing right in living with him—he was merely one of Watts' forms; at all events, when Frank met her on the evening of the 7th inst., she endeavored to rush into his arms, as though nothing of an evil nature had occurred. Frank thought, however, there was such a thing as propriety, so he held the lady away from him long enough to lecture her. But after a while the two were re-united, and they left for home as lovingly as if there was no such fellow in the world as John Smart.

LOVE'S DELIRIUM.—J. H. Mansfield, a painter, met Miss Matty Hein, daughter of a prominent wholesale merchant, on the street, in San Francisco, on the night of June 8th, and demanded that she should retract her refusal to marry him, which she declined, whereupon he shot her twice with a revolver in the breast and hip, then shot himself twice in the breast. Both are now living, and it is thought Miss Hein may recover.

STRANGE EFFECTS OF RARIFIED ATMOSPHERE.—A Nevada paper, speaking of the rarity of the atmosphere at Virginia City, says that ballet dancers are frequently unable to go through their parts, and encores are impossible. Persons arriving from places near the level of the sea, who are at home rapid walkers, soon find themselves brought up with a round turn, and either spit blood or bleed at the nose. Little brisk walking is ever seen in the city. People do not seem so active as they really are, for the reason that they have been compelled to adopt a gait which, if not lazy, is at least rather leisurely. Hot weather is felt much more severely and is much more debilitating than at the sea level. When the thermometer marks so degrees in this elevated region the air is of much less value than it is at the sea level under the same heat. Pigeons that fly very strongly in California are almost like unfledged birds when brought here. Lots of pigeons brought from California for pigeon shooting matches are often almost worthless, as upon being sprung from the trap they will flutter and come to the ground before going two rods.

FEMININE CURIOSITY in matters outside of the charmed feminine circle is very interesting, but it frequently has its penalties. An officer left a pair of handcuffs in the telegraph office at Little Falls the other day, and went out of town. A young lady attracted by the resemblance of these articles to steel bracelets, tried them on; but alas! she was caught. The officer was telegraphed for in hot haste, but it was several hours before he arrived to release the careless captive. Her curiosity on the subject of handcuffs was completely satisfied.

THE FIRST KISS.—A lady correspondent says that the first time she was kissed she felt like a tub of roses swimming in honey, cologne, nutmegs and cranberries. She felt as if something was running through her nerves on feet of diamonds, escorted by several little cupids in chariots drawn by angels, shaded by honey-suckles, and the whole spread with melted rainbows.

JEROME PARK RACES.

FOURTH DAY, TUESDAY, JUNE 11TH.

BECKDEN THE WINNER OF 1871, THOMAS THAN OLD FURMIE, WINNAY OF THE ALL AGES PURSE; LOCHIEL OF THE MAIDENS' POST STAKES, AND TUBMAN OF THE MILE HEAT RACE.

A bright midsummer sun dawned on the fourth day of the Jerome Park race meeting on Tuesday, the 11th inst. Although this day was considered an "off-day," the attendance was large, and the ladies' stand presented a charming appearance. The racing was considerably the best of any so far, this season. In the opening race for three year olds, Mr. Belmont bore the orange jacket and crimson sash of Messrs. Hunter and Travers, triumphantly past the post, Beckden, a new imported colt by Lord Clifden (the winner of the Doncaster St. Leger in 1868, out of Consequence by Ray Middleton, winner of the Derby in 1858). He is a big, strapping bay colt, near 16 hands in height, with black points and very handsomely shaped. He only ran once last years as a two year old, on the Hopeful Stakes at Long Branch, when not fully wound up in condition, he ran second to Mattie, beating Hubbard, Experience Oaks and two others. He started in the Fordham Stakes on the opening day of this meeting, but failed to get a place, Orotava winning. The stable stood him heavily, and openly declared that he could not lose, provided he ran kindly, and they were not mistaken in this form. Brennus, Mr. John Chamberlin's colt, was not apparently wound up, but owing to the cold in the Hopeful Stakes at Long Branch, when not fully wound up in condition, he ran second to Beckden, and beat the favorite Lochiel. He was also second to Lochiel in the Fordham Stakes on the opening day of this meeting, but failed to get a place, Orotava winning. The Virginia stable intended winning with Winesap, and Midday was backed to win if the other could not. Midday lay close up with Edwin Forrest, who rode a fine waiting race on the steamer, and coming away from his opponent, the flag fell in the face of the latter. Time, 2:39¾.

THE FIRST RACE

was for a purse of $800, for three year olds, entrance money to the second horse, one mile and an eighth. The only two entries were Mr. Morris' b g Blueber, and Mr. Crosse's ch f Nuisance. Pools sold as follows:—

Bluebeer	$50	$100	$195	$300	$320	$340
Nuisance	40	20	125	210	300	215

Nuisance took the lead when the flag fell, and was two lengths in front as they passed the stand, which advantage she retained at the quarter. Going around the bluff, Bluebeer was retained by her rider, but unable to live the pace he fell back beaten, and Nuisance coming away, won the race in a canter by twenty lengths. Time, 2:06¾. Summary:—

THE GREAT AMATEUR RACE IN ENGLAND.

Brilliant Victory of the London Crew over the Atalantas, of New York.

In the CLIPPER of last week we gave the result of the four-oared amateur race on the Thames, Eng., between crews representing the London Rowing Club and the Atalanta Boat Club, of this city. We now present a cable telegram, giving particulars of the contest, preceded by the record of the oarsmen comprising the competing fours, and a history of the match from the period of its inception.

THE LONDON CREW.

John B. Close, who pulled bow oar and guided the boat, is a Cambridge University oarsman, and is regarded as one of England's foremost amateurs—a fact demonstrated by his selection to occupy so important a seat in the shell of the London Club, of which he is also a member, though not of long standing, never having, to our knowledge, engaged in any of the races in which said crew participated. He won the Magdalene Silver Oars, University Pairs, with G. L. Rives, in 1870, and again, in the year following, with his brother, James B. Close, he won the Goldsboun, of University Sculls, in 1868, and the Diamond Challenge Sculls in 1870. Although we find Mr. Close's name entered repeatedly with crews for outrigger races, it is always from Cambridge, even as late as June 20th and 22d, where he rowed with the First Trinity crew for the Visitor's Challenge Cup, in the Henley regatta, in which they got a lead at once, keeping it throughout, and winning the race. In March last he rowed with the Cambridge eight in the University race and won.

F. S. Gulston, the forward midshipman and captain of the club, has participated in more races than any other member of the crew, principally as a single oar puller. His name will be found entered with a crew in all the principal regattas—Henley Royal regatta; Kings Lynn Royal regatta, Metropolitan amateur regatta, Walton on Thames, Barnes and Mortlake, and many other amateur regattas, with varied success, from 1865 to the present time.

A. de L. Long, the occupant of the midship-aft, or No. 3 seat, has made an enviable reputation on the Thames, both as a sculler and single oar rower, his record being most excellent, though not as long as that of his companions. In 1869 he won the silver goblets for pairs with Stout, in the Henley regatta, and again with Gulston in 1871. He won the Wingfield Sculls (amateur championship of the Thames) two years in succession—1869 and 1870; won the London Cup for scullers in 1869, and his numerous exploits with the oar are equally creditable.

W. Stout, who rowed stroke, has been before the public prominently for a number of years, and what he does not know about rowing is scarcely worth taking the trouble to learn. His record commences with the year 1867, and the most noteworthy triumphs of his almost uniformly successful career were as following:—Won the Diamond Challenge Sculls in 1868; the Wingfield Sculls (amateur championship of the Thames), in the same year; won the London Cup in the Metropolitan Amateur Regatta, same year; won the championship of the Ouse, same year. The foregoing are his single sculling victories, while we find him victorious jointly with crews in all the leading regattas from 1866 to the present year.

THE ATALANTA CREW.

Edward Smith, the bow oarsman, upon whom devolved the important task of directing the course of the boat, is 23 years of age and stands 5 feet 8¼ inches in height. His maiden race was pulled at Albany, N. Y., in a single scull, when seventeen years of age, he coming off victor. In 1866 he entered in the scull race at the Troy regatta, and was vanquished, as he was also in a race with Tom Fearon, during the following year. He made his appearance in the regatta of the Hudson Amateur Rowing Association in 1869, and suffered defeat at the hands of Dr. Withers and Fearon. Next year he twice encountered White, of the Gullicks, losing the first and being victorious in the other. He rowed against Deeley the same year, and lost; in 1871 he rowed against Le Roy on the Passaic river, and won; rowed in a six-oared gig race against the Columbias, and won; rowed in a six-oared gig race of the H. A. R. A. regatta, 1868; lost; rowed in six-oared shell race of the Association regatta in 1869, won; rowed with this crew in the six-oared shell race of the Association in 1870, lost. He also rowed in same position with this crew in their races with Harvard and Yale last season, and won.

Alex. Handy, who rowed No. 2 oar, was first brought prominently into notice at the Hudson Amateur Rowing Association Regatta in 1869, when he formed one of a second crew of the Atalantas, and was defeated. He had previously taken part in several races at Rutherford Park, N. J., and Greenport, L. I. With the crew of which he now forms part he rowed; was beaten in the six-oared shell race of the association in 1870, and won against Yale and Harvard last year. He has also appeared in unrecorded scullers' races of minor importance. His height is 5ft. 8in.

Theo. Van Raden, who filled the midship-aft seat, is the tallest of the four, standing 5 feet 11¼ inches. Up to the spring of 1870, he was a member of the Columbia Club (now consolidated with the Atalanta), and most of his races have taken place under their colors. He won the club championship for single sculls two years in succession, losing the belt on the third trial; rowed with John O'Neil in the double scull race of the H. A. R. A. regatta of 1868, which he won; was swamped in a single scull race against Eben Losee and John O'Neil. He resigned from the Columbia Club in the spring of 1870, and joined the Atalantas; he rowed in the six-oared shell race of the H. A. R. A. regatta of 1870; also with the same crew against Harvard and Yale. He entered for the champion belt of the Atalanta Club last season, but was beaten by Losee, whom he repeatedly challenged after the race, but who refused to row him. He is thirty years of age.

Dr. Russell Withers, captain and stroke oar of the quartet, is thirty-five years old, and his height is 5 feet 8¼ inches. He rowed No. 3 in the eight six-oared races, three of which he was victorious in. He appeared as a contestant in a working boat race, single sculls, for the club champion belt, in 1866, but lost; in the three following seasons, however, he won the belt, and afterwards resigned it to the club, closing his single scull racing with the regatta for the Banks prize, in 1869, which he won. In 1870 he rowed stroke of the present crew, losing the race to the Gullicks, under protest, on account of a foul, and stroked them against the Harvards and Yales last year.

Upon our first page we present portraits of the American crew, as also of Leander Waterbury, who accompanied them to England as substitute. The latter is thirty years old, 5 feet and 9 inches tall, and has participated in a number of single scull, four, six and eight-oared races since 1865.

THE PRESENT MATCH.

Having been unsuccessful in a previous effort to induce a picked crew of the London Rowing Club to come to this country and engage in a race on the Hudson, a special meeting of the Atalantas was held on January 25th last, for the purpose of considering the propriety of challenging said club to pull a race on their own waters, as had been suggested by a member. The Atalantas, elated with the victories gained during the preceding season, and over confident of their ability to achieve success, unanimously resolved to challenge their more experienced brothers of the oar, and on the 29th of that month they did so. In due course a letter of acceptance came from the Londoners, dated Feb. 21st, which was preceded by a cable dispatch notifying the challengers thereof. In consequence of the backwardness of the season the crew were compelled to delay commencing preliminary training until the 30th of March, when they took their first breather together in a boat since last year on the Passaic river, at Newark, N. J. This afforded them but little opportunity for practice prior to their departure for England in the steamship City of Montreal, April 15th. The crew arrived at Liverpool after a rather stormy passage, on the 24th of said month, being met at the dock by members of the London Rowing Club, who secured quarters for them in that city during the night, and on the following day escorted them to London. They stopped a day or two at Putney, and then, in order to escape from annoyance by curious people, shifted their quarters to Hammersmith, where they obtained retired accommodations, housing their boats at Biffen's boat house close by. They took their first row on the Thames on the afternoon of April 30th, but a little over five weeks prior to the date upon which the race was to be rowed. Their style of pulling was admired for its grace and regularity by the English people, but was thought to be deficient in dash and power, while the ability of the crew to stand the wear and tear of such a hard race as the Londoners were certain to give them was much doubted. The amount of work which they performed daily, and their manner of doing it, did not favorably impress the spectators, who well knew what the home crew were capable of doing. It appears that the Americans limited their work to two or five mile pulls daily, and that they rowed over the full course only a few times, and not at all at racing pace. The London crew, notwithstanding the unfavorable comments made upon the Atalantas, and their manifest inability to cope successfully with a picked four from such a club, exhibited much concern in the matter of forming a crew, choosing the three best men in their fleet of four hundred members, and even going outside of their club to select an occupant for the bow seat, the choice falling upon John B. Close, a noted Cambridge University oarsman. It has been stated that Mr. Close is a member of the L. R. C., but his connection with that organization was not generally known. This was certainly not an entirely honorable proceeding on the part of the Thames crew, but it showed that they were determined to leave nothing undone to insure success, while their daily rows of thirty miles or so, and pulls over the course at high speed proved that their whole souls were in the work. Their rowing was not, from all accounts, as showy as that of the New Yorkers, but it was more vigorous and their boat traveled so much faster than the Atalanta shell, that the betting advanced to still greater odds on them, until four days prior to the race, 3 to 1 found few takers. The shell which the Atalantas intended rowing in the race, and which was built by Geo. Roahr, of this city, was knocked all to pieces by bad weather during the passage, and they gave an order to Biffen for a new ship, which was delivered to them a few days before the race. That rowed by the London crew was built by Clasper. The subjoined cable telegram describes

THE RACE.

LONDON, June 10th—Evening.—The circumstances under which the Atlanta crew entered the race to-day were most unfavorable. At first it was thought that the match would have to be postponed, owing to the stormy weather. As the sky cleared up, it was decided that the race should be rowed, although the water was rough and lumpy, and the tide was running very strong. Further delay was occasioned by the change in the direction of the race, which was made at the last moment. This having been agreed to, both crews went on board a steamer, and, with their boats, were taken up to the other end of the course, at Mortlake. On arriving there, further time was taken for making the arrangements rendered necessary by the reversal of the route, and it was after 6 o'clock when the Londoners and New Yorkers stripped and entered their respective boats. The thousands of spectators waited with patience and good humor while these preparations were making, and as the boats shot out from the shore at 6.20 P. M., to take up their positions, there was a great shout of joy and relief, which was taken up and rolled along on both banks of the river, from Mortlake to Putney. The Atalanta crew won the toss, and elected to row on the Surry side.

The gun for the start was fired at 6.33. The English crew took the water brilliantly. In the first two hundred yards they got a length ahead, and edging to the Surrey side, took the Atalantas' water. At Barnes' Bridge, just around the curve, the Londoners had increased their gap to a length and a half. From this point the Americans made a series of desperate spurts, and slightly improved the position, drawing up to the London boat; but the tremendous efforts told on the men, and they soon began to show signs of exhaustion. On reaching Hammersmith Bridge, opposite Chiswick Mall, their distress was evident, and their pace relaxed. Their case was hopeless. The race was already won. The Englishmen gained rapidly while going through the Corney Reach, and shot under Hammersmith Bridge twenty lengths ahead. They continued to row on steadily, with ease, increasing the distance at every stroke. The Americans kept on with great pluck, but signs of failing exhaustion were plain. Up to Hammersmith Bridge the course had been kept perfectly clear, but beyond that point row-boats hampered the Atalantas, one hitting their shell hard and compelling the crew to come to a complete stop. But these accidents had nothing to do with the result of the race, which was a foregone conclusion from the start. Coming around Craven Point and heading direct for the Aqueduct Bridge at Putney, the Londoners walked away from their opponents and arrived at the bridge, crossing the line at 6.49. The dense masses of spectators on the bridge and river sides cheered and screamed, wild with excitement, as the Londoners came in sight, and sent up a great roar as they crossed the finishing line at the end of the course. The Atalantas, in spite of accidents and stops, pulled to the bitter end, and were heartily cheered as they stepped out of their boat, greatly exhausted.

On our first page are likenesses of the Atalanta crew, copied from photographs taken by Mr. J. O'Neil, No. 949 Broadway, this city.

MAINE ASSOCIATION REGATTA.

On Wednesday, June 12th, the initial regatta of this eastern boating association took place in the harbor of Portland, Me., the entries being confined to clubs belonging to that city, the unfavorable weather of the previous week having prevented the attendance of crews and oarsmen from other organizations. For the first race, four-oared boats, there were three entries, viz.:—The Jr. O'Donnell by J. Longshore, the J. C. Smith by the Ariels, the Emeralds, and the Loafer by the Ariels. The course was from Portland bridge to the stake-boat off the lower Victoria wharf, a mile and a half, and return. The Ariel crew pulled the boats got off well, but at about the third or fourth stroke the Longshore crew broke an oar and pulled out of the race. Before the other boats reached Custom House wharf the Ariel crew carried away one of their oars, which delayed them a few seconds, and gave the Emeralds a long start, and the crew rounded the stake-boat a full minute ahead of their competitor. The time announced by the judges was:—Emeralds, 29:45; Ariels, 29:57, and the prizes, a gold and silver medal, were awarded accordingly. For the sculling race there were five entries, as follows:—Alcyon, pulled by John Frazier; O'Connor Don, by F. C. Davis; Dolly Varden, by H. F. Ladd; Number Two, by M. F. Davis, and the Horace Greeley, by C. H. Emery. Frazier had the choice of position and chose the second place, with Henry inside, F. C. Davis third, Ladd fourth, and M. F. Davis outside. The boats got a fair send off, Henry getting one stroke ahead, and pulled down the course very neatly. At the stake-boat, which is in a bunch, F. C. Davis ahead, Ladd lapping his quarter, and the others a little open. M. F. Davis came to the line in 16:32, Ladd following in 16:50, Henry in 17:10, and Frazier in 17:48. F. C. Davis' time not taken. The course was from Union wharf to the stake-boat, and return, a mile and a half. Frazier, on coming in, claimed a foul of Henry and F. C. Davis, but after listening to the evidence the judges disallowed it, and awarded the gold medal to M. F. Davis, the first silver medal to H. F. Ladd, and the bronze to C. H. Emery. Mr. Hall was referee and starter, and Robinson Williams time keeper. The prizes were made by J. Ambrose Merrill & Co., and are very handsome. The two gold medals bear on the obverse side the inscription, "Maine Association Regatta," and on the reverse a lobster with the claw; and on the reverse a four oared crew pulling between Bug Light and Fort Georges, under a setting sun. The badges are in the form of shields, of different patterns, to be worn suspended from blue ribbons, and the first prize bears two silver oars crossed under the clasp.

EASTERN YACHT CLUB REGATTA.—This Boston, Mass., club held their first regatta for this season on June 12th, starting from Marblehead Rock. There were ten starters, including six schooners. The course laid out was about forty miles in length, the yachts having to pass a stake-boat moored off Egg Rock Bell buoy, off Graves', and home by way of Fig Rock stakes. A good start was made at 10.35, and with a good south-west wind the boats were quickly out of the sight of the spectators along the shore. The following is the actual time made by each boat:—Sloops—Coming, 5.54.28; Shadow, 6.47.34; Whitecap, 6.56.25. Schooners—Fearless, 6.08.39; Sylvie, 6.38.56; Vision, 6.47.34; Cactus, 6.56.15. The first prize for schooners ($150) was awarded to the Fearless, and the second ($75) to the Vision. The Coming took the prize or $100 for sloops, and the Shadow the second or $50.

THE BACHELORS' BARGE CLUB.—The several boat clubs composing the Schuylkill Navy are celebrated for the magnificence of their boat-houses, which, indeed, are among the attractive features of the quiet Schuylkill. The majority, if not all of them, are built of stone, are ornate in exterior appearance and elegantly furnished within. Chief among these beautiful structures is that of the Bachelors' Barge Club, which was among the earliest that adorned the shaded banks of Philadelphia's pet stream. Though a very handsome building, it was found entirely too small, and early this spring the work of erecting an addition was commenced, which was completed last week, and on Saturday, June 10th, the new house was formally opened. Two wings have been added to the main structure, making the dimensions at present 75 feet front by 41 deep. The first floor is entirely occupied by the boats of the club, which are eight in number, arranged according to their classes. The shells occupy the northern room, the barges the main room, while the southern room is devoted to oars, flags, lamps, etc. This room has a large balcony on the river front. No member of the club can keep a boat as his particular property, but all belong to the club. This is a good rule, as it prevents members crowding the house with too many boats. Of the second floor too much cannot be said, it is fitted up in such splendid style. This floor is divided into a number of rooms with every convenience that ease and comfort could demand. The northern room is arranged for the members when they are done rowing, with washstand and two shower baths. The main room is the club-room, containing the closets of the members. This is also handsomely fitted up, having a number of hanging baskets, also other flowers tastefully arranged around the sides of the room. The southern room is the ladies' reception-room and is elegantly appointed with a magnificent velvet carpet and furnished with a fine suit of walnut parlor furniture. The building is surmounted by a fine observatory. The expense of the improvements is $18,000, the additions costing as much as the original building. The entertainment given by the club on the occasion was excellent. The music by George Bastert's band was delightful, and was listened to by the members and their ladies, who are of the elite and beauty of Philadelphia, with great pleasure. The committee of arrangements consisted of W. K. Hutchinson, Thomas J. Ruggard and George Fred. Keene.

THE RECENT PHILADELPHIA Y. C. REGATTA.—In response to the card from the builder of the yacht Dauntless, of the Philadelphia Club, we have received the following, and now that both sides have been heard from, we must close our columns to further controversy:—

PHILADELPHIA, June 8th, '72.

MR. FRANK QUEEN.—SIR.—I noticed a communication in the CLIPPER of June 8th, in regard to the late regatta on the Delaware, on which occasion Mr. H. G. Wilkins' boat, named the Dauntless, was ruled out on account of being one inch and three-quarters too long. Now, Mr. Wilkins ought to have known that the rules were 15 ft. 3 in. on deck, mere-point not included. The Dauntless is about 15 ft. 4¾ in., and tumbles home both bow and stern, thus making her about 16 ft. on the keel, and enabling her to carry a great deal more sail than we can. Mr. Wilkins now wishes to match his boat against any 15 ft. boat on the river. He calls the Dauntless a 15 ft. boat; if he will put on the same sized sail that the fifteen-foot boats carry, he will have no trouble in making a match any day in the week. I have been induced to make this statement because I think it unreasonable to put a boat like her against boats not much more than half her size. Yours respectfully,

T. CHAMBERS Philadelphia Boat Club.

GEO. BROWN, of Halifax, N. S., has received another boat from England, and is daily expecting another from Searle, of London, a correspondent informs us. This makes a total of four shells built to his order for the match with Fulton, which ought to be a good collection to choose from.

BASE BALL.

BOSTON vs. ATHLETIC.

The long talked of match between the Boston Club, of Boston, and the Athletics, of Philadelphia, the two most prominent contestants for the championship of 1872, was played on Wednesday, the 12th inst., on the ground of the former club. The first game, played in Philadelphia, it will be recollected, terminated in favor of the Athletics by a score of 10 to 7, after a poorly played game. The extraordinary victories gained by the Athletics over the Troy, Cleveland and Mutual nines inspired their backers with great confidence—a quality that the supporters of the Boston nine were not lacking in, as they evinced by backing their favorites at the long odds of 100 to 80. Both nines were early on the ground, but, in consequence of the vast assemblage, some six thousand, were so stationed as not to interfere with the playing, some time elapsed before play was begun. Robert Ferguson, of the Atlantics, of Brooklyn, had previously been agreed upon as umpire, and the Athletics—with that singular ill luck that has attended them in nearly all their games this season—lost the toss and went to the bat at 3.50 P. M. The weather in the early part of the day had been bright and warm; in fact, the finest day that the ball players of Boston had been favored with this season, but just before the game commenced it became cloudy, and a thunder shower threatened at any moment to put a summary quietus to the game, but luckily the rain held off until nine innings had been completed.

In the first innings, McBride and Flowers reached their bases by errors of Barnes and Spalding, and Meyerle getting his on a safe hit, there were three men on the bases, and but one man out. Cuthbert, on an easy fly-catch by Harry Wright, Fisler's grounder, however, was prettily picked up by Schafer, and thrown home in time to head off McBride, and Treacy concluded the innings by striking out. George Wright led off for the Bostons with a fair-foul hit to left field for two bases, and Barnes was given his base on called balls; Leonard then hit a grounder that Flowers "juggled," thus losing an easy chance to "double up" George Wright and Barnes at their second bases, and as, in addition, made a very wild throw to first base, the consequence was that both George Wright and Barnes scored their runs, and Leonard went to second. McVey and Spalding followed with safe hits, and the former had scored an earned run when Schafer and Schafer were out in succession at first base by McBride's assistance. Rogers and Harry Wright also made their bases by safe hits, but were left by Fisler putting out George Wright at first base. Five runs were scored.

In the second innings of the Athletics, Mack made his base by an excusable error of Schafer's, but he was left; George Wright fielding McGeary and Cuthbert out at first base, and Leonard capturing Anson on the fly.—The Bostons also failed to score, although Leonard had made one base by a safe hit to short left field, Anson retiring Barnes and Spalding by good throws to Mack at first base, and McVey striking out.

In the third innings of the Athletics, McBride made his second base by a fair foul hit to left field, and Flowers was given his base on called balls, but both were left, Meyerle popping up a fly foul to McVey, and Treacy giving an easy chance to George Wright on the fly, while Fisler's hit to Barnes led to his retirement at first base. The Bostons scored an unearned run in this innings, Schafer and George Wright getting their bases by Anson's errors, and Rogers by a wild throw of McBride's. Schafer scoring the run, Treacy terminating the innings by a good catch at left field.

In the Athletics' fourth innings Anson, McGeary and Mack were retired at first base, Schafer assisting to retire the latter player. The Bostons scored three more unearned runs in this innings, Leonard leading off with a safe hit, but he was put out by McGeary's throw to Fisler, while attempting to steal second. McVey then made two bases by the best hit of the game, a "screamer" between centre and left fielders. Spalding was captured on the fly by Treacy. Gould and Schafer then hit grounders that Flowers muffed, and as Treacy made a wild throw to the home-plate to head off McVey, the consequence was that not only did he but also Gould reached that point in safety. Rogers' safe hit then sent Schafer home, and a good running catch at centre field by Meyerle then disposed of Harry Wright, with the score standing 9 to 0 in favor of the Bostons.

In the fifth innings, McBride, after making one base on a safe hit over second, scored the first run for the Athletics, and Meyerle who had made one base by an excusable error of Schafer and Flowers', who had for the second time been given his base on called balls, were left, George Wright retiring two men at first base by good stops and throws, and Schafer concluding the innings by an excellent running fly-foul catch. Barnes, Leonard and McVey of the Bostons made their bases in this innings by errors of Mack, Meyerle and Anson, but a good catch at right-field, by Cuthbert, terminated the innings for a blank.

In the sixth innings, Anson, McGeary and Mack, the first strikers of the Athletics, all went out at first base, George Wright, Spalding and Schafer being credited with the assistance. Schafer made another unearned run for the Bostons, after getting to first on Anson's error. Harry Wright, who had made one base by a safe hit to centre field, was left by his brother George being taken by Anson on a fly-foul. The score now stood 10 to 1 in favor of the Bostons.

In the seventh innings the Athletics made a rally at the bat, Cuthbert, McBride, Fisler and Treacy making their bases by clean hits and the first named scoring an earned run. Flowers also made a run after he had forced McBride out at second base, and Fisler and Treacy were left by Anson's seemingly safe hit to centre field being wonderfully captured on the fly by Harry Wright, after a long run. The Bostons were then retired in one, two, three order, Treacy making an extraordinary running and jumping catch at left field in among the crowd.

In the eighth innings neither club scored, the Athletics being retired in one, two, three order, and Gould and Schafer, of the Bostons, being left after they had made their bases by errors of Anson and Mack.

In the last innings Meyerle made a good two-base hit to left field, and was sent home by Flowers' fine hit to right field, and one earned run was recorded for the Athletics. Another scored by Anson giving Leonard a life prevented the Bostons being blanked in the last innings; as it was they scored three runs, George Wright, Spalding and Gould making safe one-base hits. Thus terminated this poorly-played game in favor of the Bostons by a score of 13 to 4. The principal features were the fine fielding of George Wright, Schafer and Gould, of the Bostons, and McBride, of the Athletics, and excellent catches made by Harry Wright and Treacy. The umpiring was impartial. Score:

CHAMPION vs. STAR.

These rival organizations of Jersey City met in a match this season for the first time on the Champion's grounds, Jersey City, on June 15th. The weather was very warm, but the attendance was fair. The Stars anticipated making a good fight with the "Champs," but the latter did not see it in that light, and though they did not have their full nine out—Clarke being an absentee—they managed to send the Stars to "Chicago" with colors flying, the Champions displaying sharp fielding and effective pitching, though their batting was not up to the mark. The Stars presented a good nine that only want practice and training to make them effective. Their pitcher, however, aims too much for speed, and neglects strategic delivery. The Champions kept the grounds clean, and the contest was played with good feeling, considering the club rivalry. The Stars tried desperately to obtain that coveted run, and twice had players ready to run home from second and third, but Willis' effective pitching, aided by fine fielding, prevented them. The Stars should not be demoralized by this defeat. They have a strong nine, and can play a good game. They rallied well in the field after the first three innings, two double plays marking their score. Openshaw did service at the first base and Green was effective behind the bat, considering the wild pitching he had to attend to. Good catches were made by Hardy, Lester, Gibson and Delany. In batting, Openshaw made the only base hit scored. On the other side, Collins again bore off the palm as catcher, his putting out fifteen players and marking his play with two fine catches, and Beakes taking several foul balls in good style. Mr. Hopele acted with impartiality as umpire, but he needs to study the new rules. He allowed nearly fifty unfair balls to go by uncalled. The champions would do well to place the required iron quoits in position at the pitcher's ground, viz.:—one on each end of the front line and one on the centre of the back line. The home base, too, ought to be a white stone. The score:—

MUTUAL vs. TROY.

These clubs played their third contest, at the Union grounds, L. I., on June 11th, resulting in a rather demoralizing defeat of the re-constructed Troy nine by a score of 12 to 4, the latter making the poorest display in the field seen at their hands, in this vicinity, this season. The first game ended in the signal success of the Trojans by a score of 5 to 1, their Belding being excellent; the second ended in a victory for the Mutuals by a score of 8 to 6, and this time the New Yorkers were easily by a score equal to three to one. The Troy nine selected Mr. Bomeister as umpire, and his decisions were submitted to on both sides without demurrer. The game began at 3.40 P. M., with the Troy nine at the bat, and, though they secured bases, the side retired without gaining a run. In the Mutual side they opened with a score of two runs, obtained on one-base hits, and by a muff by Nelson and Allison. The second innings yielded runs to neither party, Martin marking his fielding with a good catch, as did McMullen. In the third innings the Troys also scored three runs on errors by Start, Boyd and Pearce, and three base hits, the Mutuals doing the same thing through the good hits of Eggler, Start and Bechtel, two of the three runs being earned. In the next three innings the Trojans gave easy chances for outs, and drew three blanks in consequence, while, on the other hand, the Mutuals punished Zettlein for a score of five first base hits and ten totals, an error by Force assisting, only two runs being earned. This left the score at the close of the sixth innings at 11 to 3 in favor of the Mutuals, and a victory in their favor a foregone conclusion. In the seventh innings Martin went in to pitch, and, her for a second ball in the ninth innings, the Mutuals would not have added another ran to their score. A dropped fly ball by Eggler gave the Troy nine a run in the seventh innings, the game ending with the totals at 12 on the part of the Mutuals. The latter did not hold up to the standard of their play in the Boston and Athletic matches on the same field, but they batted with more effect, as Zettlein is easier to punish with strict umpiring than either Spalding or McBride. The umpiring was thoroughly impartial, though not up to the right mark in interpreting the rule for calling balls. Every "unfair" ball must be called whenever delivered. This Mr Bomeister did not do. The score:—

BALTIMORE vs. OLYMPIC.

These clubs, both of the Monumental City, played a match on the Newington grounds, on the 10th inst., with result in a round O each innings for the O-lympics. Matthews pitched for the Olympics, and McDonald, the slow pitcher of the Olympics, for the Baltimores. The batting and fielding of the Baltimores was fine, and York made a fine double play, who took a fly a long distance out in the field, and sent it in to Craver in time to catch a man running from his third base home. Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, June 17th, '72.

One by one the theatres are closing up, the hot weather operating disadvantageously to the interests of the managers, some of whom make more money by shutting up than by keeping open. A few establishments still defy old Sol, and endeavor to make the theatre-going public believe that each place of amusement thus kept open is the coolest house in the city, almost as cool, probably, as the managerial announcement. Since our last, the Fifth Avenue and Olympic theatres have terminated their regular seasons, and their people are now on the wing, some bounding o'er the billows for recreation in Europe, some climbing the dizzy heights of Catskill's noble range, some dipping and delving in the breakers of old ocean, and others earning their little divvies by traveling through the realms of Uncle Samuel as "joint stock operatives" in "aggregations of extraordinary talent." And we notice, too, that those dear brethren who engineer our fashionable churches cannot stand the heat any better than the wretched sinners for whose benefit they preach fire and brimstone and gnashing of teeth; and for this reason the sacred temples are being closed as if there were no souls to save during the heated term, no diabolical wretches to be bleached white as snow in the burning rays of the sizzling orb of day, and all that. Our beloved pastors are about letting up on the devil and his imps while they go fishing, or assist farmer Greeley in climbing trees in the grand old woods of Chappaqua's shady slope; so that the fiery dragon of Hades' burning lake will have free license to roam at will through this sequestred vale and draw down to perdition thousands of our kindred and our kin.....Critics say some real funny things at times, and make the most originally novel comparisons, now and then, a most delicate curl in Paris who is au fait at this style of fine writing. Recently, for instance, he called Aiboni "an elephant with a nightingale in its throat." We can see nothing offensive in this, but had he called her a nightingale with an elephant in its throat the case would have been different, and the ignominous critic might have got his mouth organ damaged.....And still they come. In Bangor, Maine, where children are born "full of teeth and the blood of Gloster, an over-hearing mother recently brought into the world a babe with twelve toes and thirteen fingers and thumbs. We cannot see any advantage to be gained by the propagation of such handiwork, and yet we do not wish to be understood as condemning that unhappy mother. Let her make a show of the little innocent, and in this manner she can make the abominable monstrosity pay its way from the very jump.....Clam chowder is much in vogue just now, but we grieve to say its virtues is not done to the clam, the potato predominating, as it were. We witnessed a distressful scene in a chowder store this morning:—An actor man, evidently in the last stages of consumption, pow-pow consumption, you will understand—entered a feed store and called for a large bowl of clam chowder. The store-keeper ladled up a mammoth dish of the stuff, and set it before that famished gentleman, who at once peered at it like he was a surveyor of diamonds; he waded through it with a spoon, but he looked mighty disconcerted when he got a fishing line, threw in the hook and sinker, and bided his time. "Neighbor," we said, in a kind and soothing manner, "what art thou doing?" "I am fishing for clams," replied he, despondingly. "Well, you may as well save your time, for the clam that chowder is made of was caught by one of the early worms." You would have pitied that man had you seen him as he lifted his tackle, and took his sorrowful way out of the store. His body was found, an hour later, floating down the river, a dvid corpse. This is a sad warning to all disreputable clam men.....While the birds of song, and heroes of the drama, and tragedians of high and low degree, are having an "interval of rest," and enjoying themselves like anything, the acrobat, and gymnast, and balloonef, and swinger on the ropes, have to work harder than ever, and solemn-faced sifter elephants and lions and other uncomfortable beasts of prey, without any chance to strike like our fellow citizens here are doing. Hear the lament of

THE TRAPEZE-MAN IN SUMMER.

While hosts of other spangled fellers
Has been by turns in papers heard,
The bold Icarian, who flits on
The trapeze light as any bird,
Has rarely yet in print made sally,
So pray let me get in a word.
The tragic chaps is all a growlin',
The heavy father's took to drink;
The light comedian's sought his wilds,
The rest in favorite corners slink;
Yet when the drammy's on its dignes,
And opry's lyin' on its oars,
There's one perfession, 'mongst the others,
As still may plead for your applause.
Strike up, ye cheery ones, your music,
And, gen'rous public, take your case,
Whilst I ascend to regions airy,
And wriggle on the high trapeze.

.....It never rains but it pours, some fault-finding scribe once placed on the record of notable sayings. Wallack's company, who have been engaged in "The Long Strike," for several weeks, have now been notified to serve "On the Jury," as soon as the "Long Strike" is over. Some men are very unfortunate, or otherwise, as the case may be....."Oh, Romeo, wherefore are thou Romeo?" must have been the exclamation of Mr. Adam Forepaugh when he saw the Chicago surgeons cutting and gouging, and whooping, and burning the forelegs of his old elephant. The aged animal, for a century, has come safely out of every danger, every accident, every difficulty, but the surgeons' knives and red hot crowbars were rather too much for even an elephant to bear up against, and he died after undergoing one of the most horrible operations ever performed.....There is no truth in the report that the dramatic profession of this city is about to strike for eight hours work! Actors and actresses are well satisfied with the time table as it is. It will be useless for the internationals to attempt to draw them into any eight hour combination.....The people of Bridgeport, Conn., are not half as religious as we have all along supposed them to be. Only a few days ago they seized a poor organ grinder, like he was an illicit distillery, smashed his hat over his eyes, burned and otherwise misused his unfortunate organ, and then dead headed the peripatetic musician for a free rail rode ride. The soulless people, who hate music, thus vent their spleen on poor organ men. Look at Boston, see how she is afflicted this week, yet you never hear of Pat Gilmore being rode on a rail. Shame upon you, Connecticut burghers.....We hear an amusing story about a cat in Terra Haute. It is said that this creature is passionately fond of all sorts of amusements, and whenever a circus visits that town, that there cat is one of the first persons to enter within the canvas walls. Vicious boys of Terra Haute, in order to fill the mind of the cat with terror hoot at it like they was hired man, but all their un-feline efforts are futile as the baseness fabric of a dream.....Terra Haute must be a paradise for showman. In addition to the cat above referred to, we are credibly informed that in that same queer old town there lives an old woman of seventy dead and some summers, who has attended every circus within reach since she was five years old. Here's devotion for you. Circus men are a very grateful people, and if, when this lady of seventy comes in her checks, Thos. Newman don't stuff her and put her on exhibition as one of the curiosities of the nineteenth century, then we have dreadfully misconstituted the cheerful spirits of our circus friends.....We have two minstrel entertainments, notwithstanding the retreat of the regulars; and considering the uncoolish state of the weather, the boys are happy as unconcern can make them. Ladies, ever fond of ☞ [illegible] so forth of minstrelsy, have not been niggardly in their patronage of our estimable brethren, and they seem to enjoy themselves fully as much as they do when eating spoon victuals in an ice cream garden on a hot summer's night. Epigram about

GIRLS.

Said Ned, as we were coming out of
Why, pretty girls are ever good ones?
The reason's plain—they're always dressed (chaste).

.....Actors are a strange community; they play so many parts on the stage that it is by no means surprising that some of them occasionally do say a little comedy bit on the stage of life, and occasionally they play such fantastic tricks as make the very angels laugh. We will tell you a funny little thing about a man we once knew, which, no doubt, will prove interesting and agreeable. This man, whose name was Dick Buskin, the actor "aforesaid and hereinafter mentioned," was once lounging upon the levee in New Orleans, carelessly awaiting the opening of Behind Dark's theatre and pondering upon the mutability of human affairs, when, in front of a large pile of furniture—evidently that of some wealthy man leaving for Europe—he saw a person walking distractedly to and fro, clenching his hands and talking by snatches, as if some misfortune had overtaken him. "What's the matter?" asked Dick, drawing near. "Matter enough," was the answer. "The hour appointed for the sale of these goods is going by, and my auctioneer has gone on a bender and left me in a quandary. What shall I do?" "I'm an auctioneer," said Dick. "Give me my cue, and it may be I can serve you at a pinch." "Go ahead, steamboat," said the furniture man, seizing his bell; and in a few minutes Dick was rattling off his goods in a style that recalled the most successful efforts of Caleb Quotem. Presently the vender noticed that Dick was himself bidding in nearly everything that was offered for sale. "Stop, my dear sir, stop!" he exclaimed appealingly, wringing his hands as vehemently as before he had rung the bell, "the things must be sold. At this rate you will ruin me!" He was somewhat surprised when, after all the lots had been gone through, Dick handed him a check for the entire amount, and when the call boy came round to hunt him up that evening, the old man, gloriously fuddled, was seated in an easy chair, treating Colonel Sheridan and the rest of the man's wine cellar, and smashing the various statuary and furniture with the empty bottles.

City Summary.

THE SEASON CLOSED at the Olympic Theatre with the performances of Tuesday, June 11th, when an extra matinée performance was given, and the evening's entertainment being for the benefit of A. L. Fox, the popular who then performed the character of Humpty Dumpty for the one thousandth consecutive time. The attendance in the afternoon was good, and in the evening the auditorium was densely crowded in every part. Mr. Fox was in excellent spirits and his performance was as fresh as when given on its first night at this theatre. The pantomime at the evening entertainment was preceded by the farce entitled "The Lottery Ticket," in which Mr. Fox acted in an artistic manner the character of Wyndsor. At the close of that position of the entertainment Mr. Fox was summoned before the curtain by the lavish applause of the audience, whom he addressed somewhat as follows:—

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN.—I am almost ashamed to come out before you in habiliments like these, and, as I am not used to public speaking except when I commit it to memory, I hope you will excuse me from making any lengthy remarks on this occasion. But you must see that I sincerely appreciate your kindness and thanks—as they all say everybody knows that's said, and I hope I am right here. I have been in New York just twenty-one years, and I boast of it. I was quite a youngster when I first came here, and I am an old "rooster" now. My ladies and gentleman, I always strive to do my best. Neither sickness nor anything else keeps me away. For twenty-one years have I been in New York and never missed a night from sickness or anything else. And there are a great many here that know that, and my heart is so full that they must speak for me.

Throughout the performance of the pantomime of "Humpty Dumpty" he was much appreciated, and the audience were in the best of humor. After the entertainment, a banquet was given in a room adjoining the theatre, of which many of the artists, representatives of the press and invited guests partook. Wine and wit flowed freely, and the festivities were continued far into the morning. "Humpty Dumpty" was first produced at the Olympic Theatre March 10th, 1868, and enjoyed an uninterrupted run until May 15th, 1869, having been performed 483 times. During its present run it has been performed 333 times, making a total at this theatre of 816 times. Mr. Fox has performed that role at the Bowery Theatre 185 times in all, thus making a total of 1,001.

A summer season is announced to be inaugurated on Monday evening, June 17th, when Johnny Allen, Little Mac and Miss Alice Harrison, supported by a dramatic company, will act in "Schneider." Until that time the theatre will remain closed. The managers will be Hayes and Colville, with Samuel Colville as acting manager, and the following scale of reduced prices will be adhered to:—General admission, 50c.; gallery, 25c.; orchestra and balcony chairs, $1; reserved front orchestra and balcony parlor chairs, $1.50. We append a summary of the business of the past season:—

It commenced with "Humpty Dumpty" on Thursday evening, Aug. 31st, which was cast as follows:—The opening, Tragedy, Mr. Yeamans and Miss Harrison; Ballet, Mlle. Rosati, Mlle. Europe, R. Melnotte; Africa, J. De Bonny; Asia, H. Naylor; New Jersey, G. A. Beane; others, Tyson and Atkins. The harlequinade, clown, G. L. Fox; pantaloon, O. B. Fox; harlequina, Trope and Holcomb; columbines, Manola and Ella Wyatt; Sylph, sprite, Harr Willis. The incidental attractions were as follows:—A grand ballet corps, of which the Misses Adele Pagliari, Marietta Soriondo and Clemence Alexandrowa were the premiers; Misses Darsa and the Misses Hayes, Fanny Beane, Richards, Morris, Mayer, Bohm and Flora Lee, comprise, and a full ballet corps; the Martens family—Mons., Mme. and Mlle. Gretchen—Tyrolean vocalists, who, among other musical selections, sang the "Cal Duet," which ran through the entire season; Signor Casselli, juggler and artist; Swift and Swift, wire performers; H. M. Brunaux, Mabre, Robert and Reynolds, Parisian grotesques; "Young Adonis" and "Little Venus," bicycle performers; little Jeannie Yeamans, character vocalist, and the Trully Family, tumblers.

"Sister" Mary Yeamans introduced for the first time solos on the violin and trick playing.

November 4.—Harr Willis, the Sprite, attempted to abrogate his contract with Hayes and Colville, and imprisoned in Ludlow street jail.

16.—A matinee performance was given for the benefit of Mrs. Harris; the programme consisting of a number of acts by the principal members of the minstrel band and variety theatre company in the city, and the farce of the "Four Lovers," with G. L. Fox in the character of Bibo.

December 11.—To the incidental attractions A. Belzac and his troupe of trained dogs were added, and an act called the "Seven Little Men of the Mountain" was performed for the first time.

January 6.—Signor Casselli closed his engagement. 8th, the pantomime was reconstructed. The opening had been re-written and was confined to two characters, the Sun Spirit performed by Miss Lulu Price and Father Time by Mr. Reeves. Many of the previous incidental attractions were retained and the following were added:—R. M. Carroll and his three little sons—Dick, Eddie and Bennie, Irish and Ethiopian comedians; J. E. acted and gave the best satisfaction. He wrote our correspondent on June 18th.

ITALIAN OPERA at the Detroit, Mich., Opera House has proved a good card, well merited by the fine artists engaged. On the week "Norma," 11th; "Lucrezia Borgia," 12th; "Lucia," 13th; "Ernani," 14th; "Trovatore," together with third act of "Norma," and for the matinee Saturday, "Traviata," were produced, which closed the season. Signora Corani, Lauri, Signor Bacci, tenor, and Signor Rebbani, electrified the large audiences with their magnificent voices, and all possessing the dramatic talent enhanced the performances to the highest degree of excellence. T. W. Martin, agent, joins them here and takes them through Canada, opening in London June 17th; thence to Hamilton, Toronto, &c. He wrote our correspondent on June 14th.

A CONCERT given at Pike's Opera House, Cincinnati, Ohio, June 11th, a testimonial to Miss Josie Jones, was a success, the house being crowded. Miss Jones was assisted by Prof. A. C. Alfisi, P. Levanoestri, the Russian pianist; Messrs. George and Alfred Newhall, B. Smith, the Misses Jennie Sullivan and A. Fox, and Mrs. R. W. Richey. Miss Jones goes to Milan, Italy, on July 1st, for study, her design being to become a professional.

FRANK ANT received a benefit concert at Evansville, Ind., June 19th.

THE HOLMES OPERA TROUPE closed their season at Utica, N. Y., June 15th.

BELLE TOM performed to a good house at Brown's Hall, Rockford, Ill., June 19th. His route ahead is as follows:—Milwaukee, Wis., 14th; Matoon, Ill., 18th; Indianapolis, Ind., 17th; Covington, Ky., 18th; Marysville, Fort Smith, O., 20th; Dresden, 21st; Galloway, 22d; Pomeroy, 24th; Parkersburg, Va., 25th; Cumberland, 26th; Martinsburg, 27th, and closes the season at Winchester, W. Va., the 28th. He will pass the summer at Warrenton, W. Va.

AIKEN'S OPERA BOUFFE COMPANY performed at the Olympic Theatre, St. Louis, Mo., during the past week.

Variety Halls.

MAHS AND HOGLE'S MORAL ENTERPRISE is the name given to a new variety combination now traveling in New York state. Rollin Howard in his specialties is one of the attractions, and the balance of the company is composed of William McAllister, balladist and comedian; George and Willie Guy, double clog; Master Charley Guy, song and dance, and James Maas, Dutch comique and banjoist. They have an orchestra and brass band, and performed at Middle Granville, N. Y., June 17th, and are billed for Poultney, Vt., 17th; Fair Haven, 18th; Whitehall, N. Y., 19th, and Fort Ann, 20th.

WM. A. HUFFLEY, banjoist, balladist and composer, who can be addressed care of this office, is favorably noticed by the southern press, as will be seen by extracts in another column.

MISS HANNAH BIGGS, while performing at Wild's Varieties, Syracuse, N. Y., recently fell and dislocated her arm, but is rapidly recovering.

TURNER AND LESTER, song and dance men, can be addressed as per advertisement until July 8th.

ROBT. W. MORGAN, vocalist, jig dancer and Tyrolean warbler, can be addressed care of this office.

JOHNSON AND POWERS publish a notice in another column, stating that their sketch, "Sambo's Serenade," is duly copyrighted.

AT BROOM'S OPERA HOUSE, Memphis, Tenn., there were four new appearances the past week, as follows:—Clark Gibbs, Ethiopian comedian; Marsh Adams, comedian and actor; Miss Mayer and Miss Albertine, dancers. Most of the old favorites are still here and were with usual favor at the hands of appreciative audiences. The Misses Fanny Duane, Annie Clare, Kitty Whitland, Nellie Irene and Messrs. Clark Gibbs, Charlie Petrie, George Wild and Fred. Harris, are among the old favorites, still delighting audiences.....At the Olympic Varieties, Manager Billy Buchanan, is doing a first rate business with a fair company. The latest appearances are Miss Minnie Baker, sensation song and dance lady and serio-comic vocalist; and Lizzie Buchanan, danseuse. George Marcetis is making a first rate stage manager. Little Mary, the child wonder, retains her former popularity, while the accomplished vocalist, Millie Zoe, gains in favor nightly. Miss Deverney improves in her terpsichorean efforts and is already a favorite artist. Al. Grimth is back here again in all his pristine vigor and eccentric humor. He is a good card. Jimmie Mitts and Jimmie Taylor are both improving rapidly and bid fair to become great in their line. So wrote our correspondent on June 16th.

MAGUIRE'S OPERA HOUSE, San Francisco, Cal., has been transformed into a variety palace. Aline le Favre, the Can-can dancer, opens it on June 10th, with a newly organized company. Johnny Manning, who has been east to engage talent, has arranged for the appearance of first class variety stars in rapid succession, the first of whom will be Annie Adams, serio-comic vocalist, about July 1st. Will then a strong company be engaged in this city, with other attractions. The first part will introduce sixteen ladies, one-half of them dressed in rich white satin, trimmed with gold fringe and braid, and the other half in crimson satin and gold. Lew. Rattler, Ethiopian comedian; the American combination, consisting of the child Americus, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coriell, Miss May Leslie and Miss Maude Brandon, with a large number of other performers, will take part in the performance.....At the Bella Union Theatre M'lle Marie Gaugain, danseuse, and Miss Jenny Johnson, vocalist, made their first appearance on June 3d. Add Weaver and son and Miss Nellie Whitney are underlined.....A burlesque on "Divorce" is to be brought out at the American Theatre on the 10th. Emma Forrestelle, Fanny Webster, May Leroy and George Foster have made their first appearances.

THE HOWARD, Boston, Mass., commenced a summer season with Mary Bloodgood. Tim Williams, the great Pedante and others, on June 10th, and this week "Dark Friday" will be revived.

THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Richmond, Va., has been doing a satisfactory business this week. The company now performing there is, as a whole, the best of the season. Bowman and Harris are a host in themselves. Tim Morris remains a favorite. Miss Helen Revere, jig dancer, is good in her specialty, and is wished good looking. The Holt Sisters, dancers, lack animation, and there is room for improvement. Mlle. Leoline and Joe Allen give satisfaction. The management propose running the place throughout the summer. So wrote our correspondent on June 14th.

G. W. JESTER, ventriloquist, who can be addressed as per advertisement, has a vacant date for Sept. 23d.

HARRY BROWN, HARRY WHARTE AND CARRIE BUNNELL appeared for the first time at Theatre Comique, Bay City, Mich., the past week. Brown is an excellent vocalist and comedian, taking the house by storm. Annie West and Mollie Macy are the departures, both going to Smith's Opera House, East Saginaw. On June 17th Miss Viola Clifton and Messrs. Turner and Lester are to appear. Business is good. June 24th Miss Bell Ryan appears.....Among the new attractions at Tammany Hall are Miss Laura Delano and Billy Rassin, who open June 17th. Billy Devere continues the reigning favorite, the audience never tiring of his stirring ballads. The Lillian Sisters appeared during the past week, and are admired greatly. No departures are announced. So wrote our correspondent on June 14th.

AT THE THEATRE COMIQUE, Detroit, Mich, the new people on June 10th were Ross Lee and Peasley and Fitzgerald. Ross Lee is a fair singer. O'Peasley and Fitzgerald we have spoken of in the highest terms when here a few weeks ago, and they have fully sustained their old reputation. D. L. Morris is the only Dutchist that we have had who can hold his audience, and all are sorry to hear that he closes his engagement on the 15th, going to St. Louis, Mo. Fred. and Emily Siegel, Kearney and Moran, Blanche Selwyn and little Bennie also close on the 15th. The following open on the 17th:—Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Nickle, Foy sisters (second engagement), Quilter and Goldrich. Geo. Edeson was in town this week, visiting his friends, and opens at the Comique for a short season in July.

AT THE VARIETIES, Williamsport, Pa., Mr. Frank Bennett, a popular Ethiopian comedian, took a farewell benefit on the evening of June 14th.

THE OLYMPIC THEATRE, Sioux City, Iowa, has been rebopened for the summer season. Talent is wanted. See card elsewhere.

CINCINNATI, O., VARIETY HALL NEWS up to the 14th is given by our correspondent as follows:—"At the Race Street Varieties attendance is very weak, notwithstanding show. Christie Morrell was billed to appear this week, but was detained in St. Louis and will not reach here before next week. The only thing in the nature of novelties has been a burlesque circus. Lucy Adams in her pleasant change songs, Sadie Lloyd and Lou Florence in ballads, Minnie Baker in her spirited songs and dances, George Morton, Lew Cavana and Jim Finley in Ethiopianisms, have furnished a pleasant programme for summer weather. Lucy Adams closes to-night, going to Indianapolis, Ind., for four weeks. William Carlton and Jennie Gilmer reached town to-day, and will probably appear here next week.....At the Olympic the new appearances this week have been J. W. Eagan in Irish character songs, and Julia Barton, a vocalist, whose voice is good and style cultivated; Prof. Lawrence, M. A. Griffin, Johnny Donaldson, Billy Scott, Miss Pauline, Ida Morton, Kate Rimmer, Bertha Manning and Minnie Hunter. A fresh pantomime and the statuary of the Lawrence Troupe seem to be the leading features. Biz. fair.....At the Pacific, the only change has been the departure of J. W. Eagan. Johnny Max winds up this week. Last night (Thursday), an extra entertainment was given by the Haukudori Glee Club, assisted by several volunteers, among whom was Johnny Birch, Carrie Austin and Johnny Weaver. The company now consists of William Dunning, contortionist; Mons. Ventini and M'lle Zulelia, trapezists and hat spinners; Master Victor, clog and song and dance; Walter Gall, balladist; Harry Leary, comedian, and Geo. White, comic vocalist. Business very good.....Tony Pastor's party opens at Wood's Theatre on July 1st."

AT THE NATIONAL HALL THEATRE COMIQUE, Evansville, Ind., the company is as follows:—Jerry Johnson, proprietor; Johnny McVeigh, stage manager; Mollie Sargeant, comic vocalist and dancer; Lew Rainford, song and dance; Kate Montrose, Emmie Laporte, Billy Reed, Tommy Adams, Tommy Dayton, Hank De Von, leader of orchestra; Prof. Laporte, pianist.

AT METROPOLITAN HALL Washington, D. C., Charles Brown, W. E. Deverdic, Josephine Walby, Jennie Morrell, and Agnes Robertson made their appearance on June 10th, and the programme of the week was varied and good. Charley Brown, Ethiopian comedian, made a big hit in the minstrel scene by manipulating the tambo and singing "Widow McGee" and in the olio did an act entitled "The Musical Festival" with success; W. E. Deverdic did a contortion act; Miss Walby, and Josephine Walby executed her skipping rope dance gracefully. Jennie Morrell performed upon the concertina corner, harmonicon, accordeon and bones, and was well received. Agnes Robertson sang "Fairy of the Wild Wood" etc., moderately well, and the Zig Zags appeared to better advantage than previously. Jennie Morrell closed June 14th, and Dora Dawron, double voiced singer, and Letha Herman, female banjoist, are announced for June 17th.

THE ATHANEUM THEATRE, Chicago, Ill., is running as smoothly as could be desired. John F. Poole's "Larrikin" proves an acceptable closing piece. It is mounted with some fine scenery, by Frank A. Skiff, well seconded by the company. It is gotten up under the auspices of Gus Peters, and certainly reflects credit upon this artist. M'lle Irma danseuse, and Geo. Wilson appeared on the 10th. M'lle Irma is a handsome little lady and an accomplished artiste. Geo. Wilson is an olden-time favorite. M'lle Annetta appears in ballad and character acts and is the recipient of well-deserved encores. Gem and Fox execute a new double song and dance in a taking style. Maude Stirling (Mrs. Frank Poole) and Frank Moran, to advantage in the burlesque. John Fielding makes himself generally useful as interlocutor, and as Dame Budget in "Larrikin." Bob Winter sings a ballad and takes well. Alf Miles and Victoria Ross are announced for June 17th. No departures.....King's Royal Amphitheatre is on its last legs, and is at present running as a petit music concert. So wrote our correspondent on June 14th.

AT THE VARIETY HALLS in St. Louis, Mo., there were no fresh appearances during the past week.

THE GLAUBE SISTERS are announced to appear at the Walnut Street Theatre, Kansas City, Mo., June 24th.

THERE WERE no fresh appearances at Wild's Opera House, Syracuse, N. Y., during the past week. C. E. Blanchard, business agent, returns on July 1st and goes to Rochester to manage the Opera House, a new hall of great capacity, which will be opened as a first class variety theatre.

MISS EMILY ANDERSON, a pale comic vocalist, was the attraction at Vale's Winter Garden, Philadelphia, during the past week.

AT THE WASHINGTON VARIETIES, Providence, R. I., the fresh attractions of the past week were Hattie Howard, jig dancer, and Geo. Beasley, song and dance man. Dick Gorman was expected, but broke his engagement. Tillie Prestage is announced for the 17th. Stalker & Hopkins' traveling company, which started on the 10th, is doing a large business so far as heard from. Route this week:—Webster, Mass., 17th; Southbridge, 18th; Chicopee, 19th; Northampton, 20th, Westfield, 21st, and Springfield, 22d.

THE OLYMPIC VARIETIES, Brooklyn, L. I., closed for the season on June 17th, with a benefit performance to W. H. Mayberry, treasurer.

TOM DILLON, character vocalist, comedian and song and dance performer, advertises that he can be engaged.

AT THE MALTINORE, Md., OPERA HOUSE the new appearances last week were Den and Lillie Hoare, who figured in double acts and sketches; Henry Huddle, gymnast; Claudia Walters, dansouse, and Lizzie Davis, exhibitor of trained canary birds. The balance of the programme comprised the negro comicalities of Dick Parker, Harry Hart and Harry Price, Lizzie Barrett's "serio-comic songs," danced by Miss Rose, Harry Smith and Laura Le Claire, and the local drama of the "Serpents of Baltimore." In the first part Miss Jennie Howard officiates as interlocutor, and she does it with commendable vim and finish. Prof. Kerich is now leader of the orchestra. Harry Hart closes to-day. Bob Hall, Matt Wheeler and Ada Freeman are announced to appear on the 17th.....At the Odeon Varieties the new faces were Maggie Mc-Intosh, station artist and descriptive vocalist, and Victoria Orville, vocalist. Miss Macey Rosdrop's excellent songs and dances meet with favor. The other performers here at present are Belle Graham, Maggie Bowers, Pat Murphy, Sam Orme, Dan Howard and Frank Hall. Julius Wegner, treasurer, took a benefit on the 18th; he wrote our correspondent on June 18th.

AT SHELBY'S COMIQUE, Buffalo, N. Y., a continued run of good business attended the performances during the past week. The new faces were Quilter and Goldrich, song and dance, and Chas. Worigo and Harry Guion, comedians. The opening piece, "Dispatches of Importance," was comically rendered by Reese, Andrews, Emma Marsh and others. Miss Nagle, in her comic songs, and Mons. Reveni in his flying rings act, followed; Miss Emma Marsh executed a jockey Agrippine with skill; Mr. Frayne performed the somewhat novel feat of hitting a mark with his rifle pointed over his shoulder to his rear; the negro interlude of "Ellsson's Arrival," by Worley, Guion and Reese elicited outbursts of merriment; Miss Nagle and Mr. Worley gave a medley of comic songs, and in response to encores each responded to the other's calls; Miss Clara Butler rendered "Thou Art so Near and Yet so Far" with her uniform sweetness of tone, and was complimented by an encore; Quilter and Goldrich displayed remarkable proficiency in their songs and dances, receiving a triple encore, and the trapeze exercises of M'lle Zoe and Mons. Reveni concluded the first part of the bill. Mr. Frayne's nautical drama of the "Lost Ship" terminated the performance, and was finely enacted by the company. The piece is of the sensational order, abounds in thrilling situations, and during its production the hero, Mr. Frayne, executed several difficult ride shots. Miss Clara Butler, as Rose Linden, appeared to advantage, as did also Miss Malinda Nagle as Sally Pappie. The departures for to-night are as follows:—Quilter and Goldrich, who go to Welch's Varieties, Detroit, Mich.; Frank Frayne and Clara Butler, who open at Mortimer's, Philadelphia, Pa., on the 17th, and M'lle Zoe and Mons. Reveni, destination not ascertained. A partially new company is announced for the 17th at the Comique, among whom will be Miss Minnie Easinforth, comedienne; W. C. Burton, comedian; J. P. Hill, trapezist; John Campbell, ventriloquist, and the Harrison Sisters, who return from Cleveland, O. The burlesque of "Masonry Exposed," by Mr. Leon Whettony, is underlined for early production. So wrote our correspondent, "Typo," on June 18th.

THE VARIETY LINE in East Saginaw, Mich., is very fair. Smith's Opera House is moderately well filled every evening, and the performances are good. Turner and Lester, song and dance men, have had a favorable reception. George Thatcher does a pleasing business and is well received; Blanch Castle is a good singer; M'lle Lazette, in her songs and dances, is warmly received; Victoria Ross is a favorite; Miss Annie West does an excellent song and dance, and Alf. Miles in his serio-comic songs elicits applause; Gus. Clark continues as stage manager. Mr. and Mrs. Alf. Miles (Vic. Ross) go to the Alhambra, Chicago, on the 17th. The Lopez troupe, five in number, acrobats, open on the 17th; Fred. and Emily Seigel are underlined for the 24th, and Belle King and C. C. Mathews, gymnasts, for July 1st. Belle Bird is under engagement and will soon appear.....The following new people are billed to appear at Buckley's Opera House, Saginaw City, Mich., June 17th:—Messrs. Sobsey, Sommers and Andy Collins. John Eubles' Sisters open Thursday, the 20th; also, Billie De Vere. Johnny Smith and Molly Sommers go to Grand Rapids, for a short engagement, on the 17th. Lew Hallett goes to the same place June 24th. Billy Hossen and Laura De Lano are underlined for Bay City on the 17th for two weeks. The company the past week was a very strong one and consisted, in addition to those mentioned above, of Frank Steel, stage manager; Miss Belle Bird, Maud Le Roy, M'lle Sallie, Mr. Pichert and little Topsay. The house is doing a good business, we are informed by our correspondent.

FALLON & SHAHAN, double clog and song and dance men, advertise that they can be engaged.

CLARA BURTON, who can be addressed as per advertisement, states that she was not at the Olympic Theatre, Sioux City, Mo., as stated in our last issue.

AT THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Galveston, Texas, George C. Thompson received a benefit on June 7th, and Miss Lotta Mitchell made her last appearance on that date.

VARIETY TALENT and ballet girls are wanted for Smith's Opera House, East Saginaw, Mich. Address the manager as per card elsewhere.

THE USUAL VARIETY of attractive features was presented at Mortimer's Philadelphia Varieties during the week ending June 15th. The only new face was Miss Maggie Gray, who made a decided hit in her serio-comic vocalism and lady echo. Miss Kate Brooks continues her engagement on the 18th inst. The management announces several new stars for the present week, including Miss Clara Butler, serio-comic vocalist and actress; Mr. Frank Frayne, melo-dramatic actor, and Little Frankie Frayne, all of whom will appear in the melo-dramatic specialty of "Oroloosa, the Half Breed; or, The Dead Shot of the Sierra Nevadas." During the piece, Mr. Frank Frayne will execute the sensational feat of shooting with a rifle an apple from the head of Mr. Chas. Sanders. John T. Kelly, Irish comedian, also open there on the 17th.

THE ZANFRETTA TROUPE appeared in pantomime last week at Smith's Island, performances being given every afternoon with the exception of Monday and Saturday. This week, John T. Kelly, the Irish comedian, will appear in conjunction with the Zanfretta troupe, and an entire change of programme will be presented.

E. M. Davis, ventriloquist, and Sargent, illusionist, at present performing at the Eleventh Street Opera House, Philadelphia, Pa., commence a week's engagement at Washington, D. C., on July 1st, and open at Boston, Mass., on the 8th.

LADY VOCALISTS are wanted for Kossuth Garden, Troy, N. Y. Address as per advertisement.

TONY PASTOR and his traveling troupe are billed ahead as follows:—Evansville, Ind., June 24th and 25th; Vincennes, 26th; Terre Haute, 27th; Indianapolis, 28th; Richmond, 29th, and at Cincinnati, O., one week, commencing July 1st.

Negro Minstrelsy.

CARNCROSS AND DIXEY'S MINSTRELS commenced a season of two weeks at the Academy of Music, Pittsburgh, Pa., on June 18th. The house has been crowded every night up to this writing. Fifteen artists appear in the first part, with C. F. Dixey in the bone and Frank Moran on the tamborine end. G. W. H. Griffin is interlocutor. The ballad singing of Carncross seems to be the feature. Eugene, in his female impersonations, is a prominent attraction; the "Rival Wizards," by Moran and Dixey, is a good act; the burlesque of "Il Trovatore," in which Eugene and Unsworth take the principal roles, is very entertaining, and Frank Moran, as Gilmore the Huge, in "Gilmore's Jubilee," is very funny. On the 13th, the company went to Dixmont Insane Asylum, and entertained the inmates thereof with a varied and choice programme.....Manning's Minstrels opened at the Pittsburgh Opera House on the 10th inst., to a fair audience. Billy Manning did not appear during the first nights of the week, but Andy McKee kept up his end, and his coadjutor, E. M. Hall discharged his duties satisfactorily. There were twelve people in the first part. Steve Rogers' clog was quiet and artistic; McKee and Rogers' singing of "Rebecca Jane" was well done; Ricardo and Sig. Gustave Bidaux, made good impressions by their excellent vocalization, and Harry Percy and J. J. Kelly acquitted themselves creditably at ballad singing. So wrote our correspondent on June 14th.

CAL. WAGNER'S MINSTRELS exhibited at Williamsport, Pa., on June 12th; Lancaster, 13th; Reading, 14th, Allentown, 15th, and are billed to perform at Easton on the 17th.

THE ST. JAMES, Boston, Mass., has had good houses with the second week of Birch, Wambold and Bachus' San Francisco Minstrels, who have kept up a constant change of programme.

THE SENSATION FEMALE MINSTREL TROUPE continues one of the features at the Varieties Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa. John F. Fisher has taken the place of Alfred McDowell on the bone end, and is the only new appearance. He is versatile, and a very clever Ethiopian delineator. Kate Wilson, Hettie Howard, Clara Bogart, Mary Bogart, Emma Ellenger and Annie Jackson do a song and dance ballet, which is received by the audiences with decided favor. It is a good act, and creditably given by the ladies engaged in it. Maggie Willett's vocalisms are so popular that the lady is encored three and four times nightly. The new people, on the 17th inst., will be Little Josie, Miss Lou Edwards, J. E. Carton, Kitty Sharp, Dick Gorman and Frank Carlton. Those leaving after the 16th inst. are John Denier, Maggie Willett, Dora Dawson, Alfred McDowell and Charley Gardner. Those retained will be James Edwards, John F. Fisher, Kate Wilson, Flora Benton, Hettie Howard, Clara Bogart, Mary Bogart, Emma Ellenger, Annie Jackson and Frank Carlisle. Next (this) week will be the last but two of Mr. Aims' management. So wrote our correspondent on June 14th.

BALLY MANNING'S MINSTRELS are billed for one week at Pike's Opera House, Cincinnati, O., commencing June 17th. Joe Rainer, the veteran interlocutor, has joined the party.....Billy Emerson's Minstrels begin a week at the same hall July 15th.

SKIFF AND GAYLOR'S Minstrels performed at Richmond, Va., June 10th, 14th and 15th.

M. B. LEAVITT'S MINSTRELS performed at Cherryfield, Me., June 10th; Ellsworth, 11th; Bangor, 12th and 13th; Old Town, 14th; Dexter, 15th, and are billed for Kendall's Mills, 17th; Waterville, 18th; Hallowell, 19th; Gardiner, 20th; Augusta, 21st; Lewiston, 22d, and Portland, 24th.

DUPREE AND BENEDICT'S MINSTRELS are billed to perform at Marietta, O., June 17th; Parkersburg, 18th; Logan, 19th; Zanesville, 20th; Wheeling, W. Va., 21st, and Steubenville, Ohio, 22d and 24th.

ENNER LINDEN, of Dupree and Benedict's minstrels, is noticed as follows by the Cincinnati Star of June 8d:—

The performance gave the greatest satisfaction. Linden, in particular, came in for any amount of applause. On Saturday night he was encored no less than four times before the audience would be content to let him depart. Mr. Linden is one of the most finished and correct vocal artists in the profession, and signs us pleased to record his success.

BILLY HARRY, Gus. Anderson, Johnny Morton and Billy Sensell, are requested to address C. B. Hicks, as per advertisement.

SIMMONS AND SLOCUM'S MINSTRELS, at the Alhambra Theatre, San Francisco, Cal., had much to contend against in their second week, the appearance of Barrett at the California, and Maggie Mitchell at the Metropolitan, with the continuance of Sam Mason at the circus, dwindling their business down to moderate audiences. On June 10th Add Hyman will produce his original burlesque of "Hamlet."....The Emerson Minstrels were at Virginia during the week, but, owing to wretched weather, failed to draw as large as was expected. They closed on the 8th, and went to Reno.

ARLINGTON, COTTON & KEMBLE'S Minstrels at Chicago continue to hold forth to goodly sized audiences..... Emerson's Minstrels are extensively billed for the 17th, at Michigan Avenue Theatre, for two weeks.

DAN HAVLIN'S MINSTRELS commence a week's season at "De Bar's Opera House, St. Louis, Mo., June 17th.

HARRY ELOSSGOOD'S combination is to give an entertainment at Harrington's Opera House, Providence, R. I., on the 20th.

HOOLEY'S MINSTRELS returned to Brooklyn on the 17th, and re-opened their Opera House for the summer season with regular minstrelsy on June 17th. The programme of the week includes "Blinks and Jinks," "The Sausage Machine," "Mrs Dideman's Party," and "The Catastrophe," in which Mulligan, Rice, Rogers, Noel White, Schoolcraft and George Charles appear. J. W. Clark, banjoist, has been added to the company.

Circuses.

THE CHILD BROS., trapeze performers, advertise that they can be engaged.

THE EQUESTRIAN profession desiring to join the Equestrian Benevolent Association, and those members of the association who have not paid their dues, are referred to a card in another column.

O'BRIEN'S FOUR SHOWS CONSOLIDATED were exhibited at Frostersville, Va., June 10th; Windsor, 11th; Woodstock, 12th; Bethel, 13th; Rochester, 14th; Brandon, 15th, and are billed ahead as follows:—Middlebury, 17th; Vergennes, 18th; Huntington, 19th; Richmond, 20th; Waterbury, 21st; Montpelier, 22d; Cambridge, 24th; Bradford, 25th; Hanover, 26th; Wells River, 27th; St. Johnsbury, 27th; Lyndon, 28th; Cabot, 29th; Barre, 30th; Hardwick, July 1st; Hyde Park, 2d; Fairfax, 3d, and St. Albans 4th, and thence into Canada.

STOKE AND MURRAY'S CIRCUS performed at Calais, Me., June 10th and 11th; Presdriction, N. B., 12th; St. John, 13th, 14th and 15th; Fredericton, N. B., 17th; Moncton, 18th; Kentville, 19th; Halifax, 20th, 21st and 22d; Pictou, 24th, and New Glasgow, 25th.

ALEX. ROBINSON'S NEW YORK STATE CIRCUS MUSEUM AND MENAGERIE, performed at Friendship, N. Y., June 10th; Cuba, 11th; Portville, Pa., 12th; Smithport, 13th; Port Allegheny, 14th; and Cowdersport, 15th. This week they will be at Emporium, 17th; St. Marys, 18th; Penfield, 19th; Clearfield, 20th, and Phillipsburg, 21st. A cage of Asiatic lions, and one of laughing hyenas, have recently been added to the menagerie.

WILLIAM LESTER, contortionist, died in New Orleans, La., May 1st, of small-pox. He had been recently connected with G. W. Noyes' Crescent City Circus, and previously with many prominent companies in this country. He had been engaged by manager Bidwell of the Academy of Music in the city—where he died—to impersonate Dragonia in the "Black Creek," which was produced there on April 8th. On the 19th he was attacked with disease which caused his death. During his illness Mr. Bidwell did all in his power to alleviate his sufferings and defrayed all the expenses of his illness and calls; Miss Clara Butler rendered "Thou Art so Near and Yet so Far" with her uniform sweetness of tone, and was complimented by an encore; Quilter and Goldrich displayed remarkable proficiency in their songs and dances, receiving a triple encore, and the trapeze exercises of M'lle Zoe and Mons. Reveni concluded the first part of the bill. Mr. Frayne's nautical drama of the "Lost Ship" terminated the performance, and was finely enacted by the company. The piece is of the sensational order, abounds in thrilling situations, and during its production the hero, Mr. Frayne, executed several difficult ride shots. Miss Clara Butler, as Rose Linden, appeared to advantage, as did also Miss Malinda Nagle as Sally Pappie. The departures for to-night are as follows:—Quilter and Goldrich, who go to Welch's Varieties, Detroit, Mich.; Frank Frayne and Clara Butler, who open at Mortimer's, Philadelphia, Pa., on the 17th, and M'lle Zoe and Mons. Reveni, destination not ascertained. A partially new company is announced for the 17th at the Comique, among whom will be Miss Minnie Easinforth, comedienne; W. C. Burton, comedian; J. P. Hill, trapezist; John Campbell, ventriloquist, and the Harrison Sisters, who return from Cleveland, O. The burlesque of "Masonry Exposed," by Mr. Leon Whettony, is underlined for early production. So wrote our correspondent, "Typo," on June 18th.

THE VARIETY LINE in East Saginaw, Mich., is very fair. Smith's Opera House is moderately well filled every evening, and the performances are good. Turner and Lester, song and dance men, have had a favorable reception. George Thatcher does a pleasing business and is well received; Blanch Castle is a good singer; M'lle Lazette, in her songs and dances, is warmly received; Victoria Ross is a favorite; Miss Annie West does an excellent song and dance, and Alf. Miles in his serio-comic songs elicits applause; Gus. Clark continues as stage manager. Mr. and Mrs. Alf. Miles (Vic. Ross) go to the Alhambra, Chicago, on the 17th. The Lopez troupe, five in number, acrobats, open on the 17th; Fred. and Emily Seigel are underlined for the 24th, and Belle King and C. C. Mathews, gymnasts, for July 1st. Belle Bird is under engagement and will soon appear.....The following new people are billed to appear at Buckley's Opera House, Saginaw City, Mich., June 17th:—Messrs. Sobsey, Sommers and Andy Collins. John Eubles' Sisters open Thursday, the 20th; also, Billie De Vere. Johnny Smith and Molly Sommers go to Grand Rapids, for a short engagement, on the 17th. Lew Hallett goes to the same place June 24th. Billy Hossen and Laura De Lano are underlined for Bay City on the 17th for two weeks. The company the past week was a very strong one and consisted, in addition to those mentioned above, of Frank Steel, stage manager; Miss Belle Bird, Maud Le Roy, M'lle Sallie, Mr. Pichert and little Topsay. The house is doing a good business, we are informed by our correspondent.

FALLON & SHAHAN, double clog and song and dance men, advertise that they can be engaged.

CLARA BURTON, who can be addressed as per advertisement, states that she was not at the Olympic Theatre, Sioux City, Mo., as stated in our last issue.

AT THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Galveston, Texas, George C. Thompson received a benefit on June 7th, and Miss Lotta Mitchell made her last appearance on that date.

VARIETY TALENT and ballet girls are wanted for Smith's Opera House, East Saginaw, Mich. Address the manager as per card elsewhere.

THE USUAL VARIETY of attractive features was presented at Mortimer's Philadelphia Varieties during the week ending June 15th. The only new face was Miss Maggie Gray, who made a decided hit in her serio-comic vocalism and lady echo. Miss Kate Brooks continues her engagement on the 18th inst. The management announces several new stars for the present week, including Miss Clara Butler, serio-comic vocalist and actress; Mr. Frank Frayne, melo-dramatic actor, and Little Frankie Frayne, all of whom will appear in the melo-dramatic specialty of "Oroloosa, the Half Breed; or, The Dead Shot of the Sierra Nevadas." During the piece, Mr. Frank Frayne will execute the sensational feat of shooting with a rifle an apple from the head of Mr. Chas. Sanders. John T. Kelly, Irish comedian, also open there on the 17th.

THE ZANFRETTA TROUPE appeared in pantomime last week at Smith's Island, performances being given every afternoon with the exception of Monday and Saturday. This week, John T. Kelly, the Irish comedian, will appear in conjunction with the Zanfretta troupe, and an entire change of programme will be presented.

MRS. F. S. CHANFRAU.
SEASON OF 1872-3.
The engagements for the second starring season of this beautiful and brilliant young artiste, already extend beyond the holidays. First class managers, desiring time, subsequent to Jan. 1st, 1873, are respectfully invited to address the undersigned.
MRS. CHANFRAU'S previous season is believed to have exceeded in general prosperity that of any lady star, with two exceptions; its artistic results very fully confirmed her honorable New York, Boston and New Orleans distinction, as one of the most gifted and accomplished actresses now gracing the stage.
Her repertory will include a new society comedy, a strong emotional play, from the French, and probably other attractive novelties, together with her specialities of last season, "Christie Johnstone" and "Expiation." To the latter, powerful play an additional act of intense interest has been added.
First class managers desiring dates for MR. F. S. CHANFRAU, are also requested to communicate with the undersigned.

CHAS. OTTO,
AND THE SENSATION,
C. C. PALMER.

ALL THE ABOVE ARTISTS WILL BE SUPPORTED BY A REGIMENT OF OTHER BIG GUNS, too numerous too mention, forming the most STUPENDOUS MINSTREL ORGANIZATION IN EXISTENCE, having during the past twenty years out-lived nearly all the old and new traveling minstrel troupes in this country, and now for our reward the ENTIRE PRESS OF THE AMERICAN CONTINENT and the united voice of the people pronounce this the GREAT MONARCH OF MINSTRELSY,
AND THE ONLY FIRST CLASS ETHIOPIAN TROUPE NOW TRAVELING.
The following elegant, high toned, and popular places of amusement have been secured and leased for a short season at each house for a
FOUR MONTHS' SUMMER TOUR,
exclusively for the above famous company at a rent of over SEVENTEEN THOUSAND DOLLARS
AND TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS,
for Salaries, Board, Railroad Fares, Printing, &c., &c.
TOTAL EXPENSES FOR THE FOUR MONTHS' TOUR,
FORTY-TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS.
A small fortune to some traveling minstrel managers, but to us it is only a common expense occurrence:—
